Makarios given British support

LONDON (AP) — Armed with promises of British support, Archbishop Makarios flew off to New York today to ask the United Nations to condemn the Greek military junta for the coup that overthrew him.

He told newsmen he had Britain's assurance it would not recognize the new military regime on Cyprus.

"I was very satisfied with the talks I have had with the prime minister and the secretary of state," the bearded archbishop said of his meetings with Harold Wilson and James Callaghan, the British foreign minister.

"I found a great degree of understanding and I appreciate the British attitude on the situation in Cyprus.

"I appreciate their assurances that under no circumstances are they going to recognize the so-called new regime imposed by the junta of Greece upon the people of Cyprus."

The archbishop was expected to appear before the U.N. Security Council on Friday.

Small-member powers of the U.N. Security Council were circulating a proposed resolution. It reportedly called for the withdrawal from Cyprus of the Cypriot national guard's Greek officers who led the coup. It also expressed opposition to annexation of the island by Greece, which is believed to be the object of the coup.

While Makarios pressed his personal crusade, Britain and the United States were trying to ease the threat of an armed confrontation between Greece and Turkey. But even though both the easternmost members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization had put their armed forces on emergency alerts, American military officials in Washington said they believed an armed clash between Greece and Turkey was unlikely.

Joseph Sisco, President Nixon's special emissary, flew into the British capital for urgent talks with British and Turkish leaders on the Cyprus crisis.

On the Mediterranean island itself, the Cyprus national guard pressed a massive manhunt for left-wing politicians and others who supported Makarios.

More than 1,000 persons have been arrested since the guard's Greek officers led it in the revolt. Soldiers began house-tohouse searches in the capital of Nicosia and other cities, towns and villages on Wednesday.

Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit brought his defense and interior ministers to London, conferred late Wednesday night with Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Foreign Secretary James Callaghan and prepared to fly back to Ankara today for an emergency session of the Turkish parliament. There was no indication what the British told him they would do to prevent the 115,000 Turkish Cypriots being brought under Greek rule.

No more fighting was reported on Cyprus. The rebellious National Guard and its Greek officers apparently were in full control, and the international airport at Nicosia, the island's capital, reopened today to regular traffic for the first time since the upheaval.

Prairie announces school staff

EAST PRAIRIE — New personnel for the R-2 School District has been announced by Supt. Gerald McElrath, who said all positions for the 1974-75 school year have been filled.

New instructors and their positions include: Kathy Alsup, junior high English; Bill Beck, junior high social studies and head basketball coach; Paul Cannon, junior high industrial arts; Weatia Cannon, elementary learning disabilities; Myrna Carlisle, senior high English; Nancee Fields, Title I remedial reading; Judith DeLine Hathhorn, speech therapist.

Judith Ann Holmes, elementary remedial reading; Janie Jeffries, junior high remedial math; Pat Little, remedial reading; Janet McMinn, senior high girls physical education; Gary Risenhoover, senior high math; Bonnie Story, senior high speech; Susan Sutherland, junior high girls physical education; and Jacqueline Wilks, kindergarten.

McElrath acknowledged a gift of an organ to the music department from Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hall of East Prairie. The instrument, to be housed in the high school, will be available to community groups using school facilities as well as for school activities.

Hall, presently an associate judge of the second distirct in Mississippi County and a candidate for re-election, served for many years on the Pinhook school board and the county board of education. He assisted in the reoganization of the county schools and served on the first school board at Locust Groves School for several years.

In donating the organ to the district, Mr. and Mrs. Hall each expressed their interest in area children learning to play the organ and developing their skill so they can play for churches and other organizations.

Approximately 200 students, grades one through eight, are attending the district's summer school program, which will close July 26. There are 20 teachers, five teacher aides and one nurse employed in the program which is designed to provide students, six months or more behind grade level, with the opportunity to acquire knowledge in reading and language arts.

McElrath said each class has 10 or less students and with individualized help from teachers, students are showing improvement in communicative skills in the areas of reading, spelling, listening and writing.

The district has also sponsored a migrant program this summer at the Dorena School. The six- week program will conclude July 26.

Other summer projects include the remodeling of a classroom for the new home economics department at the junior high school. Two complete kitchens, including washers and dryers, ranges, one range with a micro-wave oven, refrigerator with ice maker and disposals have been installed. Five new sewing machines have also been purchased. This year will be the first time the class will be offered to junior high students as a full qualified course with laboratory facilities.

Under the Title I program for economically and educationally deprived students, the district has purchased two mobile units which will be used for six classrooms. Remedial reading, language arts and

Pedestrian killed at Hayti

An Osceola, Ark., pedestrian was killed and two other persons were injured in two traffic accidents Wednesday in the Bootheel area, the highway patrol reported today.

Euriel Childers, 62, was killed at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Hayti when he walked from the median of Interstate 55 into the side of a southbound tractor trailer truck driven by Willis Charles Smith III, 22, of Olney, Ill.

The body was taken to Dean Funeral Home in Caruthersville.

Two persons were injured at 7:40 a.m. on Route D four miles north of Jackson when a northbound pickup truck driven by Ronald Hueter, 16, of Millersville rounded a curve, ran off the road, skieed across the pavement and struck a southbound pickup truck driven by James Edwin Moore, 23, of Oak Ridge.

Moore suffered minor injuries and a passenger in the Hueter truck received serious injuries. They were taken to Southeast Missouri Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

Police recover stolen truck

A half-ton truck, reported stolen at 12:04 a.m. today, was discovered a short time later about 150 feet from where it had been taken.

Some items were reportedly missing from the truck when it was recovered.

Police said they were told by Harley Edward Albers of Brandon, S. D., that he parked the truck, owned by Brewer Implement Co., Route Two, outside the Kingsway Plaza Mall at 11:50 p.m. Wednesday and went into a tavern to get a drink. When he came back outside at 12:04 a.m. the truck was gone.

Police discovered the truck a few minutes later parked by the J. C. Penney Co. loading dock, about 150 feet away.

A citizens band radio, a beer cooler and three pairs of pliers were reportedly missing from the truck when it was recovered.

Arsonist tries to burn tires at Caproco

Someone apparently tried to set fire about 1:10 a.m. today to the rear wheels of a tractor- trailer truck parked at Caproco, Inc. on Industrial Drive.

The fire was discovered by a police officer.

Firemen said a bale of hay near the rear tires of a trailer was set afire. Firemen extinguished the blaze and there was no damage to the truck.

The 220 employes who are members of the International Upholsters Union are on strike at Caproco.

Firemen were called at 9:25 p.m. Wednesday to a grassfire at 205 N. Ingram Road. The fire spread to a flat bed trailer parked there before firemen could extinguish the fire. The trailer received minor damage.

Strike agreements send few to work

Tentative agreements have ended strikes of Rhode Island prison guards and 4,000 state employes in Ohio, but nearly a quarter of a million other Americans stayed away from work today as a result of labor disputes.

Communications workers authorized a strike vote against the Bell Telephone System and pickets marched at two airlines, Arizona copper mines, San Francisco bus garages, and a Minnesota snowmobile maker. Walkouts also affected municipal workers in hundreds of cities and private industry.

Labor experts say the strike surge swiftly followed the end of federal economic controls, and in most instances workers sought to fight inflation with wage hike demands that exceeded 10 per cent.

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said it has tallied more strikes than at any time since it began counting in 1959, with 230,000 workers involved in 588 strikes during the week that ended last Monday.

This was the labor scene early today:

TELEPHONES — The Communications Workers of America early today authorized a strike vote against the Bell Telephone System, but a union spokesman said talks would continue while the union's 500,000 members vote on the strike question over the next two weeks.

However, some 1,300 CWA members of Local 2001 in West Virginia went on strike and an official of the local expected 2,500 employes of

LET'S ASSIST
POLICE DEPENDENTS

Between 1969 and 1972, a total of 488 law enforcement officers in the United States lost their lives in the line of duty. In too many of the cases, widows were left with too little money to send their children to college.

Although no amount of money can lessen the heartache that comes from such a family tragedy, the country has an opportunity to assure that such children in the future will not be denied an education. Under a bill (S. 2657) now before the Senate, higher education scholarships would be given to dependents of public safety officials killed in the line of duty.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Frank E. Moss (D-Utah), would cover policemen, firemen, and prison guards. It would provide for payment of tuition, fees, books and room and board up to $3,500 annually.

The assistant chief of police in Salt Lake City, Dewey J. Fillis, testified recently before the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee on the Moss bill. "In most areas across the nation, with the exception of the larger cities, the salary of law enforcement officers is very low," said Fillis. "Should an officer meet his death, the family, particularly the wife, would only receive one-fourth the officer's salary."

Fillis added, "In our area that would amount to the meager sum of $250 a month — even less if the officer had not obtained the status of first grade patrolman." He noted that nearly half the policemen killed are young men with less than five years of experience on the force.

The Moss bill becomes even more significant in light of the increasing incidence of violence in America. During the past several years, for example, more than 60 officers have been killed after making routine traffic stops.

The nation, unfortunately, cannot remove the dangers, from law enforcement work. But we can — and should — provide for the education of those who are left fatherless through such tragedy.

THE CASE BUILDS
'Differences' don't enhance Nixon's

Some of the differences between the White House transcript of tapes of President Nixon's Watergate conversations and that released by the House Judiciary Committee are purely scatological, but others, it appears, cannot be dismissed so lightly.

The committee's release of its version of the transcripts drew the immediate fire of Ronald L. Ziegler, President Nixon's press secretary. Among other things, he said publications of the committee transcripts was "an effort of the committee to divert attention from the fact that there is no case against the President."

We can't go along with Ziegler's view. A least two passages in the committee's version, it seems clear to us, present some rather damning evidence that Mr. Nixon had in mind obstructing justice.

One of these, as quoted in the committee version of the transcript, has the President telling his counsel, John Dean: "... I want you all to stonewall it, let them plead the Fifth Amendment, cover-up or anything else if it'll save the plan. That's the whole point. On the other hand, uh, uh, I would prefer, as I said to you, that you do it the other way."

From the contest, it is evident that "the plan" refers to a cover-up plan to conceal White House involvement in Watergate. "The other way" would be to have witnesses tell the Senate Watergate committee part of the story, "if it's going to come out anyway," but not all of it, by any means.

In either case, it is obvious that Mr. Nixon didn't want to be entirely frank with the Senate committee, or with the American people about White House involvement in the affair. It is equally obvious that, based on that attitude, the House Judiciary Committee could argue, with some justification, that the President was guilty of at least wanting to obstruct justice.

The other passage dealt with Mr. Nixon's reaction to a proposal to pay off E. Howard Hunt, who apparently had demanded $120,000 as the price for his silence on the Watergate affair.

The House committee's version of the conversation between the President and Dean on March 21, 1973, contains this quote from Mr. Nixon: "Don't you agree that you'd better get the Hunt thing? I mean, that's worth it, at the moment." The second sentence of that quotation was not in the White House version which was made public.

The portion that to us seems especially damaging to the President's case is the phrase "that's worth it."

For the rest, the House committee transcript differed from that released by the White House mainly in that it included a considerable number of words and phrases which, in the White House version, had been covered by the phrases "expletive deleted" or "characterization deleted."

Their inclusion does nothing to bolster the President's reputation of being a man who shuns profanity, but we rather doubt that it will do any further damage to him so far as the general public is concerned. Anyone who read the edited version of the transcripts made public by the White House very likely read the deleted words into them, anyway.

Incidentally, members of the Senate Watergate committee did not appear to be very surprised by the new evidence made public in the House committee transcript. They had, they indicated, already deduced that an attempt to coverup was on. Sen. Sam Ervin, the committee chairman, said: "The plan (of the White House) was to pretend in public to cooperate, but at the same time to do everything possible to obstruct and impede the committee's investigation."

Whether the new transcripts have little impact on the public or the Senate panel or not, we consider that, despite Ziegler's protestations, they greatly strengthen the case for Mr. Nixon's impeachment.

A SINISTER

On the theory that prices of cold cerals could be reduced 10 to 12 percent, the government is moving to break up what it calls a monopoly in the cereal industry. Reducing the price of a box of breakfast cereal a few cents is hardly a matter of great import in these days of two-bit dollars. Yet, the drive is on, and it involves far more than the question of monopoly.

As one observeer suggests, "It hints of a broad-based and formidable attack on existing business fundamentals in many industries..." It is a new type of campaign to remake the business system, supposedly for the benefit of consumers. To help with the job, a bill has been introduced in Congress entitled the Corporation Control Act. A sponsor of the bill calls it "a sweeping revision in antitrust law enforcement" which has the purpose of insuring "the maintenance of competition within a truly free enterprise system."

One may well wonder just how much free enterprise will be left when companies like the breakfast cereal makers have to justify their existence. The $650 million cereal business is highly competitive. Profits of four leading companies in 1971 averaged 5 percent on sales which is modest indeed. They have 137,980 stockholders and 109,500 employees. As part of the U.S. business system. they have been important contributors to the economy of the nation and to the support of government as taxpayers. The fact that they must now prove their right to stay in business indicates as nothing else could the need for a better understanding of what business does, why it does it and who benefits from it.

THE SOLZHENITSYN
CASE IS NOT CLOSED

The expulsion of dissident author Alexander Solzhenitsyn appears to have been a brilliant stroke by the Kremlin. Western intellectuals note with chagrin that the wave of outrage that swept the world in the wake of the action has ebbed as quickly as it began. Diplomatic repercussions seem to have been nil.

More adverse publicity may be in store for the Soviet regime when translations of Solzhenitsyn's expose of Stalinist terror, "The Gulag Archipelago," come out in the West. Even so, it will have gained very much and lost very little— at least in the short run — by ridding itself of a prominent figure who was attacking the very ideological underpinnings of the Soviet style of socialism.

This should not be surprising. Bold, lightning strokes have paid off for the Kremlin in the past — the quelling of the revolution in Hungary in 1956 and the incipient revolution in Czechoslovakia in 1968, in both cases by massive armed invasion. Compared to these brutal events, the exiling of Solzhenitsyn and his family appears positively benign.

Yet it all mounts up. Each exposure of the true face of communism in Russia has cost the Kremlin dearly. Today, only the most radical or naive socialists outside the Soviet Union still look to it as the "motherland" or model of Marxist revolution. It is seen for what it is, a dictatorial, nationalistic power even more repressive of human freedom than was Russia in the days of the czars.

In the Soviet Union itself, bootleg copies of "The Gulag Archipelago" are being worn out by intense circulation among intellectuals and young people.

By physically removing Solzhenitsyn, the Kremlin may have solved its immediate problem. But the man's ideas and the truths he proclaimed continue to have a life of their own, and an influence on the younger generation of Russians who effects no one can now foresee.

EVERYTHING
IN ITS SEASON

HIGHWAY SAFETY

A definite trend is being established in highway traffic safety. Losses in human life are being reduced. An example of this pattern can be found in the fatality figures posted for the past July Fourth holiday. Traffic authorities revealed that the fatality rate was cut by almost one third. Officers said 511 persons died in traffic accidents this Fourth while 758 had been killed in 1972. (1972 was selected for a comparison year since it was the last one involving a four-day weekend.)

Most experts in the traffic field attributed the reduction in loss of life to the nation-wide cutback of speed limits to 55 miles per hour, a step taken to conserve fuel during the worst of the energy crisis. Speed, traffic authorities say, determines the extent of injuries and the reduction in the fatality rate seems to confirm their belief.

Deaths, injuries and property damage due to traffic have sometimes been referred to as "our national disgrace." It may not be that bad but the yearly losses were nothing to be proud of, certainly. Human suffering and financial losses are the big factors in the highway picture, but it should be remembered that mounting traffic problems have taken thousands of police man- hours away from the war on crime. As the traffic problem rose, so did the crime problem.

The 55- mile speed limit probably is unpopular with some motorists but the safety it is inducing makes the law a good thing. Ironically, those who oppose the reduced speed limit may some day owe their lives to it. HLH.

THE NEWS ON THE BEACH

EAST HAMPTON, N.Y. — Many people are discovering this summer that it isn't (ital) what(unital) you read but (ital) where(unital) you read it that counts. This was dramatically illustrated last weekend at East Hampton, Long Island. I was lying on the beach and the only thing between me and the Atlantic Ocean was a young lady in her 20s trying to get a suntan. In order to do this she lay on her stomach with the top half of her bathing suit undone. This, I assumed, was so that she would get an even tan. As long as she stayed in her position there was nothing to see but her back. But you never know what can happen on a beach.

"I see," my wife said reading the paper, "that the failure of the SALT talks means that both superpowers are going to go full steam ahead on offensive missiles."

"What a pity," I said. As I saw it, my best bet would be if some little kid ran by and accidentally showered sand on the girl forcing her to turn her body to find out what was going on.

My wife turned a page. "The bank rates are up to 12¼% and now they're predicting they'll go to 13%. Herb Stein, the President's economic adviser, says the only one to blame for inflation is the American people. Do you think we're really responsible?"

"If he says so," I replied. There was another hope. If some bather came out of the ocean wringing wet and dropped water on her back, the shock of it might make the girl sit up.

"The White House transcripts don't jell with the ones released by the House Judiciary Committee," my wife read. "Mr. Nixon certainly looks like he knew a lot more about Watergate than he admitted. Why is it taking them so long to impeach him?"

"That's a good question," I answered. My only other hope would be a cloudburst. The icy raindrops would certainly make her panic.

"It says here," my wife continued, "that Mr. Nixon's strategy, if the Supreme Court makes him turn over the tapes, will be to stonewall Jaworski, by saying it will take a lot of time to find the tapes and edit them. In that way the House Judiciary Committee won't have time to hear all the evidence before they're forced to vote. All he's doing is stalling. Doesn't it make you furious?"

"Live and let live I always say."

"You don't seem very excited about the news," my wife said.

"I am, I am. Why is Mr. Nixon stonewalling Herb Stein?"

"He isn't stonewalling Stein; he's stonewalling Jaworski."

"Hmmmn," I said. The dear girl seemed to be asleep. My only hope now was that she'd have a bad dream and wake up startled.

My wife continued reading the paper out loud. "The National Football League strike is still on. You might not be able to see the Redskins this fall."

"If you've seen one football game you've seen them all," I muttered.

"Are you all right?" she asked.

"I'm fine. My neck hurts a little from the sun."

"You know," my wife said, "she's (tal) not (unital) going to move."

"Who?" I pretended to be surprised.

"That topless floozie over there." She folded up her newspaper neatly. "Anyway even if she moved, it wouldn't have done you any good."

"Why not?"

"Because," she said sweetly, "I would have kicked sand in your eyes."

Washington-Merry-Go-Round

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
FDA Taking New Look Into Fluoride's Effects

WASHINGTON — Half of America today drinks fluoridated water to avert cavities. Yet federal authorities are suddenly taking another belated look at its safety and effectiveness.

This could revive the great fluoridation controversy of 20 years ago, although the authorities are going about it coolly and quietly.

The flouride fighers of the 1950s regarded the addition of fluoride to drinking water as a "Communist plot" to brainwash the American people.

For those who have forgotten or are too young to remember, there really were "little old ladies in tennis shoes" passing out pamphlets in the aisles of New York subways. There were town marches and angry campaigns. The Daughters of the American Revolution were aghast.

But gradually, the tide turned. The Public Health Service led the fight for fluoridation. Congressional hearings in 1961 seemed to show fluoride was safe and didn't build up in the body.

In 1961, 70 communities turned to fluoride. Another 100 added fluoride to their tap water in 1962.

The fluoride fighters all but fell apart in 1966 when they lost their final battle in New York City. American dentists helped sound the death knell by putting their official seal on fluoridated Crest, to the envy and outrage of less resourceful dentifrice peddlers.

Soon the doughty Daughters stood almost alone, with last- ditch, antifluoride fanatics manning mimeo machines. But a few worried scientists had their own private reservations. Within the last few days, the Food and Drug Administration has taken some careful, tentative steps to reconsider fluoridation.

The FDA is moving at the insistence of a California Institute of Technology biologist who is so reluctant to make his findings public that he begged us to kill this story. The quiet scientist is Dr. Edward Groth III, whose hesitant conclusions come from study of 1,000 papers and countless abstracts, books, summaries and scientific publications.

On June 3, with much hedging and apology, Groth wrote to Dr. Lloyd Tepper, FDA's energetic associate commissioner, himself a student of anti- cavity additives.

"I must admit to being a bit reluctant to write to you on this subject," he told Tepper, "since I do not want to get into a position of supporting the opponents of fluoridation, with whom I have little sympathy."

Groth said he recognized that the body of research seeming to "support the effectiveness and safety of fluoridation is enormous. And there is an apparently overwhelming consensus among experts that (fluoridation) reduces dental caries some 60 per cent, without any adverse effects on any person."

That duly acknowledged, Groth proceeds to make a devastating case for reopening the files on fluoridation.

For one thing, he observes, the Public Health Service was involved in a gigantic conflict of interest at the time of the fluoride fever.

The fluoridation idea, as Groth explains it, "was developed by the dental branch of PHS, and the evaluation of the adequacy of the evidence was conducted primarily by PHS scientists and by other outside scientists who were also very much involved in the development and promotion of the measure.

The key studies, said Groth, lacked even "the most basic elements of 'blind' design" which ensure total objectivity. Besides, factors such as the subjects' dental care, diet and fluoride intake were never even cranked into the studies, he reported.

More ominously, Groth wrote, "there is still not adequate evidence, despite numerous statements from high places to the contrary, that (fluoridation) is without appreciable risk."

All these considerations were brushed aside 20 years ago because of "the political controversy which swirled around fluoridation." The heat of the debate "made it expedient to have as firm a scientific statement as possible, and as early in the game as possible," Groth concluded.

When Tepper got the letter, he told us he decided that "we could not just push it aside. It comes with credentials of a high order." Not only Groth, he explained, but some of his elders, including two well-known biologists and a pharmacologist, are also concerned about the long range effects of fluoridation.

"We definitely have made no conclusions, but we are going to look into the issue," he told us.

Groth, who had hoped the new fluoridation controversy could be handled within the scientific community, told us: "I'm keeping my fingers crossed. I don't want it to lead to more choosing up sides."

Footnote: Groth has at least one powerful ally in Washington. Ralph Nader tells us he has been worried about the inadequacy of follow- up tests on fluoride intake for years. He blames the FDA for footdragging on a definitive nationwide survey.

Inside Labor

by Victor Riesel

Could Paralyze Nation: Drive to weld country's Civil Service Workers into huge new Labor Movement

WASHINGTON — In some cities public employe union members haven't buried the dead. Or gathered the garbage. Or guarded prisons. Or patrolled mental institutions. Or have been battling the police. That is, where the police haven't been striking. National Guard units have been thrown into the streets. It's a very proletarian push.

But the public's seen nothing yet. Marching side by side with the garbage men, the cops, the prison guards and blue- collar workers are the people's white- collar employes.

It's a new militancy. It's well directed -- mostly by a coalition which has escaped much notice. Behind most of the street action are two of the nation's largest labor organizations -- totaling 2.2 million members.

They've launched a drive for a new trade union center -- to match in the public sector, meaning state, county and municipal employes, what the AFL- CIO is in the private sector (auto, steel, rubber, garment, etc.).

Don't make light of it. In the agitational tornado's eye is the aggressive Jerry Wurf, national AFL-CIO vice president, president of the 700,000- member American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees and dynamo of the still low-profiled (but not for long) Coalition of American Public Employees (CAPE).

Working shoulder to shoulder with Wurf in CAPE is the 35- year- old Terry Herndon, executive secretary of the newly militant 1.5 million- strong National Education Assn. (NEA). For about 110 of its 112-year-old existence the NEA has been a prissy school teachers professional organization. Today they're on the march. In the final hours of its massive convention (9,711 delegates, in Chicago) just as the Fourth of July holiday set in, the NEA called for a new "formal, national organization to be a trade union center in the public labor sector." Convention orators called for unionizing 12 million public employes (including federal job holders).

Organizationally CAPE leaders have with them not only these two huge outfits but also the 200,000- member National Treasury Employees Union. And CAPE's executive director, Ralph Flynn, a close working partner of Herndon's, says, "And now we're going after the 300,000- member American Nurses Assn., the 150,000- member American Assn. of University Professors, the 325,000- member American Federation of Government Employees (AFL-CIO) and two big postal unions."

No whimsy this. Already there's an operational headquarters in CAPE's midtown national offices here. And this is the year, says Flynn, when Herndon, Wurf and the rest will continue to set up CAPEs in "all states." Already there are CAPE centers in 11 states, including Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Maryland and Connecticut.

Soon 1.5 million hospital workers will be eilgible for unionization -- and strikes. Soon a bill will give municipal employes the right to strike -- similar to what is called the "Canadian alterantive." The public employes can choose either to shut down a city or go to arbitration.

There's a bill round the corner which would give federal employes the right to strike. This isn't just a phrase. It would give the unions the power to shut down the postal system, air control towers, government departments. You name it.

So "civil service" workers are on the march. Soon enough they'll be able to strike as regularly as airline and auto workers. Police could too. Actually many national public employe union chiefs have been encouraged in their demand for job action by recent speeches delivered by special presidential labor adviser Bill Usery, Federal Mediation director. Those speeches sound mighty like Bill has been handing out the right to strike to police and federal emplyees, said one White House adviser the other day.

There's more there than garbage- laden streets or possible pickets waving placards in Congressmen's faces on the Hill some day.

To steal a phrase, this is the strike wave of the future -- and the mobilized labor power of the swift '70s.

There are some 10 million non- federal public employes. Many of them are black, They range all the way from sanitation workers to skilled engineers, scientists and professors of Latin. Now, says the Wurf- Herndon- Flynn coalition, the time has come to move. The AFL-CIO isn't, so we will. They might succeed.

This would create a dual labor center. CAPE officials say there's no conflict between such a movement and the AFL-CIO. Well, Wurf's union has police. So has the Service Employees International. Wurf has state road workers. So has the Laborers' international. The conflict will roil the AFL-CIO high command, the Executive Council, on which Wurf sits.

He isn't about to take his 700,000 members out of the "Federation" as did the late Walter Reuther. But neither is he pledging he won't take a walk. On the outside are forces closer to him and Herndon than those inside "16th Street" (AFL-CIO headquarters here). There is Leonard Woodcock's United Auto Workers union and Arnold Miller's United Mine Workers. Wurf is an iconoclastic tumulter.

The story is back to the home front. Millions are waiting for leaders, he believes. And CAPE thinks it has the capability to weld them into a marching mass movement. Could be.

Rotary told of industrial park needs

Jim Beaird and Charles Mitchell, representing the Sikeston Industrial Development Crop., addressed the Sikeston Rotary Club Monday night at the Ramada Inn on the needs of community effort in industrial development.

Beaird noted that a number of Rotarians were involved in relatively new and growing business concerns as well as expansion of established businesses.

Beaird and Mitchell indicated that industries are interested in locating in cities the size of Sikeston and that Sikeston gets about two inquiries per week concerning possible location of new industries.

Before Sikeston can become competitive for new industry three things should occur, Beaird and Mitchell reported.

An industrial park should be developed. There are 15 available sites in and near Sikeston and the land is fairly priced.

An industrial building of about 50,000 to 60,000 square feet needs to be erected.

The city needs to employ a person to be responsible for industrial development.

Rotarian Ken Williams announced that the annual Rotary auction would be next month and the project needs white elephant items. Anyone wishing to donate a white elephant item should call 471-3614 or 471-4659 for pick up service.

Rotarians on Saturdays will collect white elephant items which will be stored in the Federal Compress Building until auction time.

Williams also stated that Rotary will issue fair price receipts for White Elephant items for tax deduction purposes for the donor.

Ann Landers

Paperwork causes assembly-line doctors

Dear Ann Landers: I read your recent article in Prism magazine with great interest. Unfortunately, you are correct when you say physicians frequently fail to give enough time to patients who need to be listened to. In self defense, I would like to point out a few facts that make it virtually impossible for most doctors to "listen."

The average doctor works between 60 and 70 hours a week. Ten to 15 hours a week are spent on a deluge of paperwork, foisted on us by various government agencies, insurance carriers, attorneys, etc.

The increased demands on the doctor to see the sick have forced him into "assembly- line medicine" which goes against his ethical standards. Most of us are resentful and hostile to the regulations being imposed on us by governmental agencies that view us as money-hungry, uninterested and often incompetent. This harassment leads to a deterioration of the doctor- patient relationship.

As your poll and other polls have shown, the vast majority of patients regard their doctors as honest and sympathetic -- not Cadillac- driving, golf-playing, vacationaing money-machines.

I would be happy to spend an additional 15 hours a week with patients who need to be listened to, but there is a limit to the physical endurance of any man. So long as we are tied up in this morass of Paperwork, we cannot possibly be the "Sir Galahad, Albert Schweitzer and Marcus Welby" you wish we were. -- Anthony J. Croce, M.D. of N.J.

Dear Dr. Croce: I agree, the load of paperwork forced on physicians today is outrageous. Moreover, as you say, it devours valuable time that could be better spent taking care of sick people.

I wish I had some answers, but alas, I have none. Medicare, Medicaid, Blue Cross, Blue Shield and other insurance plans are here to stay and the paperwork will most assuredly go on. It's one of the built- in curses that comes with social change and bureaucracy.

Not all doctors are as dedicated as you, however. Some do NOT give the patients one extra minute and don't feel that they should. (I hear plenty about them from my readers.) But please know I'm in there pitching for the thounsands of fine physicians who are doing a wonderful job under extremely difficult circumstances. Their patients adore them.

Dear Ann Landers: May I respond to "Sick at Heart" (and not too smart), whose heart aches for a sister who is losing her husband to the office sexpot? She said, "Sis is intelligent and attractive, an immaculate housekeeper, a great cook, an example of motherhood's truest flower. She even shines her husband's shoes."

Shoes ain't where it's at, booby. I'm married to a woman who has all those qualities. The only thing this paragon of perfection lacks is the willingness to be an active participant in that one, very significant aspect of marriage which distinguishes a wife from a paid housekeeper.

It doesn't take a sexpot to hit my switches. Willing and woman will do. Cheers to you, Ann, for telling her so. -- Hungry

Dear Hungry: And cheers to you for an on- target letter. I hope your wife recognizes herself and opts in favor of expending less energy waxing the floors and channels it into more rewarding endeavors.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach; Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged by Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self- addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654.

Births of test tube babies result of hard work, luck

NEW YORK (AP) — The births of three babies conceived in laboratory test tubes and then implanted in the mothers' wombs apparently were the result of scientific research and a little bit of luck.

The feat, reported in Britain on Monday, eventually could benefit women unable to have children because of blocked fallopian tubes. Nevertheless, it raises questions and controversy.

Prof. Douglas Bevis of Leeds University said the achievement of fertilizing a woman's eggs in the laboratory did not constitute a breakthrough.

Dr. Bevis said the problem with the technique is preparing the womb so that it will not reject the fertilized egg.

He said the three births had been successful not because of any medical break-through, but because of luck. "So many have been attempted that by the law of averages some have come through," he said.

Most such attempts at conception fail because the fertilized egg is flushed out of the lining of the womb when the woman has her next period. Doctors are trying to find the secret of how they can deceive the womb into a pregnant state so the egg can implant itself and grow.

In the United States, a government health official agreed, saying, "They apparently have been lucky." He said he believes there has not yet been enough animal research to justify trying the procedure on humans.

Proposed federal guidelines for human experiments in the United States, issued last fall, recommended that the procedure not be done, pending a demonstration of safety through animal study. The proposed guidelines are awaiting the findings of a special commission studying the subject.

Bevis told the British Medical Association the babies were conceived in a test tube with eggs taken from the mother's ovaries, fertilized with male sperm and after about a week implanted in the womb. From then on the pregnancy proceeded normally, he said.

The three births, all withinthe past 18 months, are normal, with the babies showing no sign of abnormality, he said.

The announcement emphasized the developing genetic and biological revolution, as scientists work to bring man closer to new controls over human life.

Fertilizing an egg in the test tube, for example, could lead to determining the sex of the embryo before implantation into the mother. Depending on the preference for a boy or girl, a fertilized egg could be discarded if it were not the choice.

A woman could hire another woman to do the work of growing a baby from her eggs, to cite another possibility. Whose baby would such a baby be?

This kind of research might lead to the ability to correct genetic defects before implantation, thus eliminating some diseases.

But laboratory manipulation could possibly result in the introduction of abnormalities and implantation of abnormal embryos of the kind that would be aborted spontaneously under normal conditions, some scientists have suggested.

Dr. Leon R. Kass, a physician and biochemist who has warned in the past about the dangers inherent in laboratory manipulation of life, said there can be "legitimate, humane" uses for various techniques, such as allowing a woman whose fallopian tubes are blocked to have children.

However, when looked at "in the aggregate," including such topics as surrogate or hired mothers, there is cause for concern about the dangers of abuse and a possible challenge to the very nature of human reproduction, he said.

To treat a burn, quickly submerge the area in cold water — not ice cold, but below room temperature. Keep it there until it can be taken out without pain. Or apply a series of cold packs to the burn, changing them steadily. If the burn is severe, don't take the time for first-aid, but rush the patient to a hospital.

Jr. stars champs

DEXTER — The Sikeston Jr. Babe Ruth all-stars waltzed through the district baseball tournament undefeated, claiming a 7-3 win over Jackson in the championship Wednesday night.

Dale Deal was selected as the events most valuable player after hitting over .500 during the week long event.

Sikeston's stars enter the state tournament at Chaffee next week.

Don Francis fashioned a five hitter to claim the win and got nine hit backing from his teammates.

Jackson jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the third inning, bunching three hits, including a triple off the bat of Williams and a double from Niswonger to take the lead.

Sikeston battled back with a three run rally in the fourth, connecting for four hits after going hitless through the first three frames. Russell and Dale Deal sparked the inning with towering doubles.

Sikeston finished off their opponents in the sixth with a four run frame on three hits, including doubles off the bats of Dale Dea and Scott Scherer, who led the team's nine hit attack with two safties apiece.

Jackson made a last ditch effort at the undefeated leads by scoring one run in the seventh.

A&B, Security prevail

Brashears took A & B's 5-1 win against Pizza Inn and Security National rolled over Lewis Furniture 16-4 in National League action Wednesday night.

Brashears also starred in A & B's hitting attack with a two for two performance at the plate. Pizza Inn showed powerful hitting with two-base hits by Blow and Nanney and a single by Gary Laseter, but it was downhill all the way after the first inning.

Rodgers cracked a double for Security National in other action, but two-base hits by Lasters and Leonard and Garner's single were not enough to overpower Lewis Furniture.

Williams took the wound win in that game.

To get off the ground in the United States, soccer has been flying high in much of the world for some time — and so have its players. Martin Hoffman (top photo) of East Germany, recently "headed" this point into the net to earn his country a tie with the Chilean team. Another "headed" shot (bottom) by West Germany's Gerd Muller clinched his team's 3-0 win against Australia.

Gibson makes it

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The night was to have belonged to the St. Louis Cardinals' Bob Gibson, but George Foster didn't know.

Foster, a Cincinnati Reds outfielder, also had no knowledge of what he hit in the 12th inning, but his blow beat the Cards 6-4.

"All I know is I'm sure it was a breaking ball," admitted Foster, whose two-out double lifted the Reds 5½ games behind the Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West.

And, in so doing, it spoiled the momentous occasion of Gibson's 3,000th major league strikeout.

The 38- year- old Gibson , making his 279th consecutive appearance as a starter, blazed a fast ball past the Reds' Cesar Geronimo in the second inning to become only the second in history to reach the 3,000 level.

In joining Walter Johnson, who had 3,508, he also fanned Reds starting pitcher Tom Carroll and set down Geronimo on a called third strike in the fourth.

But after fanning Johnny Bench for his 3,003rd strikeout in the seventh, Gibson was lifted for a pinch-hitter amid groans from a crowd of 28,743.

"I thought he was getting a little tired," explained Cards Manager Red Schoendienst.

"He was also leading off the inning, and I thought we might get a run."

The Cards failed to score with the maneuver, however, and Gibson left with the score tied 4-4 as a victim of poor support.

"Our defense was bad," Schoendienst said. "We gave them all but one run behind him, and we should have had a double play on one."

Cincinnati, sweeping the three- game series, took an early lead against Gibson on Bench's run- scoring single in the opening inning and an unearned run in the second.

But Carroll, plagued by wildness, walked Reggie Smith and Ted Simmons to start thyCards second and Joe Torre powered his sixth home run.

Smith also picked on a Carroll changeup for his 13th homer and a 4-2 St. Louis lead an inning later, then Gibson's luck again soured.

Dan Driessen's routine fly to left fieldbecame a double when Lou Brock lost it in the lights and Ken Griffey's vicious grounder eluded Simmons at first base to score a fourth- inning run.

The 4-4 tie was forged when, with two out in the Reds' sixth, Dave Concepcion singled and scored after Griffy walked on Terry Crowley's pinch hit.

In at least partial sympathy with Gibson was Bench, who noted, "He had a hard slider and a hard breaking ball.

"Both clubs had beautiful relief," remarked Bench, whose accurate throw eliminated a potential St. Louis run following a Reds error in the 10th. "They worked out of more tough situations than we did."

Mike Garman and Rich Folkers escaped Cincinnati threats in the 10th and 11th before Folkers, 2-1, faltered in the 12th.

Darrel Chaney drew a one-out walk and Concepcion again singled, then Foster drilled an Orlando Pena delivery on a line past Brock in left.

"It was a slider," Pena later revealed in the Cards' clubhouse. "I missed on the first pitch I threw him and I thought I could get by with it."

Former laborer says American Dream not dead

EORIA, Ill. (AP) — Big John Robinson, who rose from a $1-a-day field hand to run a barbecue business grossing $500,000 a year, doesn't believe the American Dream is dead.

"It can be done," said Robinson. "You see it can be done. I did it and my wife did it. Work — I believe that's the only way to get ahead if you wasn't born rich."

As a teen-ager, Robinson sweated in the Mississippi cottonfields from sunup to sunset. He came to Peoria in the 1940s, rented a small room for $7 a week, and got a job as a butcher for 65 cents an hour.

Today, Robinson owns the building containing his old room. He buys two new custom luxury cars a year; has his suits made by a Chicago tailor, and displays with pride his 19-room living quarters.

Robinson was recently named Illinois small businessman of the year by the federal Small Business Administration.

"I like nice things," he says. "I like nice cars, nice suits. I like to build things. And my wife, that was my whole life, working hard to get her things she really wanted. So she's doing it today."

Robinson was born on a Mississippi farm to a 14-year-old mother who died when he was five. He was brought up by the white owner of the farm, where he learned a recipe for barbecue sauce from an aging one-eyed cook.

In 1949, Robinson, while working as a butcher, spent about six months and $300 constructing a small take-out restaurant in Peoria. At first he only had enough money to buy 15 pounds of ribs at a time, which he picked up by bicycle.

The hours have been long and in 25 years Robinson has taken only three weeks of vacation.

But today Big John's Bar-B-Q pit employs 11 persons, has three delivery trucks, a large catering van, dining facilities and on a good day sells 900 pounds of ribs.

Although he is black, Robinson generally has refrained from joining black community organizations. He said that had brought some criticism.

"If I don't lean to one organization or race then no one's got nothing to point at me and say, 'You're just a one-race guy,'" he said.

He also disagrees with the argument that the disadvantaged have no chance to get ahead.

"I found out some of them are actually lazy. They really don't want to work," he said. "That's the problem with the whole world. Today people want something for nothing."

What's the law?

The case of the sleepy village

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Podunk was a little village that exhibited all the exuberance of perpetual siesta time -- with one exception. Cars zipped through the main intersection of the slow- moving village like they were in an old Keystone Kop movie that had been speeded up.

Consequently, when two motorists collided right smack in the middle of the hectic intersection, both drivers sued the village for their injuries.

"The village was negligent," they insisted, "in not having installed traffic controls. Going through that intersection was like playing Russian roulette."

"While it might have been a dangerous crossing," conceded a village official, "traffic controls couldn't be put up because the village never authorized them. And, logically, if they were never authorized, the village can't be held liable for not doing something it wasn't authorized to do."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the sleepy village liable for not having installed the needed controls?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that while a village may be held liable for carelessly failing to maintain traffic controls, it may not be held liable for its neglect or refusal to install them in the first place.

(Based upon a 1964 Illinois Appellate Court Decision)

Farm accidents took 2,200 lives in 1973

CHICAGO — Approximately 2,200 people were killed in agricultural accidents in 1973, according to preliminary estimates by the National Safety Council. About 1,500 of the victims were residents of farms and ranches, and the remaining 700 were non- residents. Although the final totals have not been confirmed for 1973, little change is expected from 1972.

The 2,200 accidental agricultural work deaths are part of an estimated 14,200 total work deaths in all occupations.

A total of more than 6,000 farm and ranch residents died in accidents last year. More than half of these, however, were victims of traffic mishaps. Farm work accidents ranked second as a cause of accidental deaths to farm people, followed by home and all public nonmotor- vehicle accidents.

In addition, agricultural work accidents resulted in an estimated 200,000 disabling injuries, many of which involved permanent disability ranging from loss of a part of a finger to complete incapacitation.

About three quarters of the injured workers resided on farms and ranches. Farm machinery, falls, animals, and hand and power tools were believed to be major factors in the fatal and non- fatal work injury totals. The farm and ranch home was found to be the most frequent site of non-fatal injuries.

The cost of accidents (including fire) to farm people is now approaching $3 billion annually in the United States.

Letters to the Editor

July 12, 1974

Dear Sir:

Would you please print the following?

Upon learning of the death of Mrs. Doloras Deane of Matthews, I would like to pass on a few kind words in her behalf. She will be missed by many I am sure, as thru the years I lived in Matthews she never was too busy to lend a helping hand. She did so many good deeds expecting nothing in return. Regardless of her heavy burden trying to support a large family she always had tome to help others in time of need. Even tho' her path in life was sometimes dark never once did we hear her complain!

The last time I talked to her, she said, "I hope I have done some good along life's way."

This she surely has done!

I personally have suffered a great loss.

Thank you
Sincerely,
Martha (Trail) Roderick

TERRY KNIGHT BUYS A JET

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock group manager Terry Knight has bought a $1 million private jet which will be made available for charter to touring rock groups.

Knight said the plane, which carries six passengers and 1,000 pounds of baggage, including guitars, will be available for charter in August. It is being built for him in Wichita.

Knight has become a jet pilot but says he will not personally fly any of the artists chartering his plane.

Boonville man elected to heart fund board

Norman Odneal of Boonville was elected to a three- year term of the Missouri Heart Association Board of Directors at the 25th Annual Meeting recently at the Ramada Inn in Columbia. His term began July 1.

An active heart fund campaign worker since 1968, Odneal is heart fund treasurer for Cooper County. He is assistant treasurer and manager of the Kemper State Bank's drive-in facility.

"It will soon cost more than a penny to make a penny," says Frank H. MacDonald, deputy director of the Mint.

The first telephone was installed in the White House by President Rutherford B. Hayes who took office in 1877.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

Today in U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, July 18, the 199th day of 1974. There are 166 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in the year 64 A.D., the Great Fire of Rome began. The legend is that Emperor Nero set the fire and fiddled as the city burned.

On this date:

In 1776, New Jersey declared itself independent of British authority.

In 1792, the American naval hero, John Paul Jones, died in poverty in Paris.

In 1914, the U.S. Army created an aviation section within the Signal Corps, and six planes were made available for air training.

In 1932, the United States and Canada signed a treaty to develop the St. Lawrence Seaway.

In 1940, a Democratic National Convention in Chicago nominated President Franklin Roosevelt for a third term.

In 1969, a car driven by U.S. Senator Edward Kennedy plunged off a bridge into a tidal pool on Chappaquiddick Island, Mass. The body of Mary Jo Kopechne was found in the car.

Ten years ago: Thousands of blacks rioted in New York's Harlem after the shooting of a young black by a policeman.

Five years ago: The Central American country of El Salvador accepted a four-point peace plan to end an undeclared war with neighboring Honduras.

One year ago: The U.S. announced the end of minesweeping operations in North Vietnamese waters.

Today's birthdays: Astronaut John Glenn is 53. Comedian Red Skelton is 61.

Thought for today: Where there is no vision, the people perish—the Bible.

6 treated

Six accident patients were treated and released Wednesday in the emergency room of Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Treated were: Scotty A. Lewis, 13, Bell City, multiple scratches and bruises in bicycle accident; Rusty Beeson, 11, Sikeston, fell on end table cutting head; John T. Moore, 23, Sikeston, fell from ladder at work.

Rick Burnett, 21, Sikeston, injured right ankle at work; Ken Harris, 30, Oran, injured back at work; and Herbert Brown, 45, Morehouse, cut left index finger at work.

Prayer for today

from the Upper Room

"So faith, hope, love abide, these three; but the greatest of these is love." (1 Corinthians 13:13)

PRAYER: Father, help us not to give love sparingly; for the more we give, the greater it becomes. Amen.

2 arrested for speeding

Police today announced two arrests, both for speeding. They were Jerry Lee Gater, 315 Sunset Ave., and Craig Joseph Welker of Perryville.

News Brief

LONDON (AP) — British police put stronger security measures in force today after a bomb explosion in the Tower of London that killed one woman and injured 37 persons. It was the fourth bomb in England in four days, and the police believed all were set by the Irish Republican Army. Guards were strengthened at places of entertainment and government buildings. The public was warned to watch for letter bombs or abandoned parcels in railway and subway stations and car parks. Scotland Yard appealed to tourists who were taking pictures at the Tower Wednesday around the time of the explosion to contact them.

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Tougher and more decisive government appeared to be in store for Portugal today as military men took over seven cabinet posts, including the key ministries of interior, labor and information. President Antonio de Spinola Wednesday night announced the new cabinet headed by Col. Vasco Goncalves as premier. Although nine of the 16 cabinet members are civilians, and they include the heads of the Communist and Socialist parties, it was apparent that the clique of about 300 young officers who overthrew the heirs of the Salazar dictatorship on April 25 now will dominate the government's day-to-day operations.

School organ paid off

Cape man bound over on auto theft charge

BENTON — Phillip Luttrell of Cape Girardeau, who is charged with auto theft, was bound over to appear July 25 in Circuit Court following a preliminary hearing Wednesday during Magistrate Court before Judge Lloyd Briggs.

After pleading guilty to a speeding charge, Carl Chris of Oran was given a 30- day suspended jail sentence and placed on probation on condition he surrender his driver's license for 90 days.

Jack Keys of Chaffee received a 90- day suspended jail sentence and was placed on probation for one year after he pleaded guilty to a defraud charge.

The case against Ronald J. Eichhorn of Chaffee on a charge of possession of marijuana was continued until July 24 to allow him time to obtain an attorney.

After waiving a preliminary hearing, Wayne Lee Harris was bound over to appear July 25 in Circuit Court. Harris is charged with escaping custody and stealing personal property on June 12 from Lambert's Cafe.

After pleading guilty to an improper parking charge, Norman Richard Cruse of Essex was sentenced to 90 days in the county jail.

Fined for speeding were: JoAnn Dismuke of Bertrand, $33.50; Otis Hill of Sikeston, $27.50; David Lane of Charleston, $31.50; Jerry Hays of Marston, $27.50; Homer Harold Spradling of Cape Girardeau, $31.50; and Cubie Lee Townsend of Charleston, $29.50.

Also fined for traffic violations were:

Carl Harry McCoy of Sikeston, careless and imprudent driving, $41.50; Lilysses Neal Jr. of Sikeston, defective brakes, $51.50; Larry Sloan of Wyatt, exceeding weight for which licensed, $136; Clay Edward Higdon of Sikeston, careless and imprudent driving, $26.50; and Cecil Gadberry of Sikeston, exceeding weight for which licensed, $50.

People once believed that a mixture of fig juice and hog fat would cure rabid dog bites.

"FISH TALK" BY JUNIOR WEBB

ACCURACY!

Whether you fly cast, spin or bait cast . . . learn to be accurate. Overshooting or undershooting good fishing spots not only mean empty stringers, it tears down your estimation of your own fishing ability. Practice at home. Pick out any target (not necessarily the neighbor's cat) and cast at it until you can hit it without thinking of the fundamentals. But before you set your sights on winning a casting tourney remember this — the most important requisite to good casting is the rod, reel and line. They must be of good quality and kept in top condition. Also, make sure the reel is filled with the proper amount of line. And forget that 100 foot cast! Start with casts of about 30 feet and work up to 60 feet. This is the casting range that accounts for practically all fish caught on artificials, anyway!

Lesson No. 11 - Check Your Bike For Safety

Frequently you will see men looking under the hood of their cars, checking underneath the car, and generally looking the car over. If you were to walk up and ask them what the trouble is most would tell you nothing was wrong...right now...but it is always best to check over any vehicle BEFORE something goes wrong. This is called a "safety check."

In making a safety check on your bike, which you should make a practice of doing at least once each week, there are many things to look for and examine. WHEELS: Probably the most important parts of your bike are the wheels since they make it possible for the bike to move. It is logical then that the wheels should get careful attention. Check the spokes and see that they are secure. If one is loose, tighten it with your spoke wrench, obtainable at any bike shop. Turn your bike upside down and roll the wheels by hand to see if the wheels are straight. If not, have them straightened at a bike shop until you learn how to do this properly. (If you over-tighten the spokes this can cause the wheel to be crooked.) See that the nuts, holding your wheels on, are firmly tight, but here again, do not over-tighten. Make sure the wheels do not rub as they go around.

BRAKES: Your bike brake should stop the bike fast enough to skid tires on dry, clean pavement. If they do not, have them adjusted. Test your brakes in your driveway or other area off the street.

LIGHTS: As mentioned in lesson No. 1, take your bike lights apart, remove the batteries, wipe them off with a clean, soft cloth. Also wipe out the inside of the light casings before replaing batteries. Keep the rear reflector clean and give the same care to your rear light as you do your headlight.

CHAIN: Check your chain and the chain guard. The chain should have just a little "play" in it. A few drops of oil on the chain weekly is good maintenance. The chain guard should be secure and tight.

SEAT: Be sure your seat is properly adjusted. You should be able to reach the pedals easily. If you cannot, loosen the seat nut and lower your seat. Be sure the seat adjustment nut is TIGHT.

HANDLE GRIPS: When these become worn, replace them right away. Glue these on so they are always tight.

HANDLE BARS: See that your handle bars are in line with your front wheel and the adjustment nut is tight. Do not raise handle bars above the position where you can grasp them, without reaching up above your chest, when sitting on the seat of your bike.

REFLECTIVE TAPES: It is a good idea, in addition to your rear light and or reflector, to strip your rear fender with reflective tape. Check your tape on your weekly check-ups and replace it when it dulls or begins to peel.

HORN OR BELL: See that you have either a horn or a bell, and be sure it works. If not, replace it if it cannot be fixed.

TIRES: Check tires for proper pressure. It is a good idea to have a tire guage of your own, so you can check pressure at home or anywhere. Proper tire pressure is usually shown on the side of each tire.

CLEANING: Clean your bike regularly. A clean bike will last longer, ride better and be safer. When you wash it down be sure to put a few drops of oil on the moving parts when finished.

QUESTIONS	YES	NO
Spokes that are too tight or too loose can cause bike wheels to be wobbly.	—	—
If your brakes don't skid the tires on dry pavement they need adjustment	—	—
It is best to make a "safety check" of your bike every two or three months	—	—
Bike lights work fine without any special care.	—	—
Your chain guard should be firm and secure at all times.	—	—
It's o.k. to have handle bars raised to nose level, if you like them that way.	—	—
If you find something wrong with your bike, and you can't fix it or no one in the family can fix it, it is your responsibility to get it to a bike shop and have it fixed properly.	—	—

Council to seek new grantee for Head Start

PORTAGEVILLE — The Head Start Council decided Tuesday to seek a new grantee for their program, according to C. B. Huber, Head Start director.

The decision stems from an earlier vote by the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation (DAEOC) to dismiss John Porter of Kennett, as the social services director of the Head Start program.

Huber said the council's decision Tuesday rejects DAOEC as a grantee, but the final decision of rejection rests in the Health, Education and Welfare Department's regional office in Kansas City.

Andrew Cain of Essex, chairman of the DAEOC board, reported that the board would continue to reject Porter as an employe.

"No real action was taken against Porter at this meeting," Huber said.

Porter presented his defense at the close of the meeting.

World News In Brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House lawyer James St. Clair made his final argument in President Nixon's defense today to a House Judiciary Committee that has already received proposed articles for his impeachment.

A working paper prepared by Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., for the committee's consideration, proposes seven articles charging Nixon with violations of the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

A draft of the articles was distributed privately by Brooks to Democratic committee members. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

Brooks' major article is a charge that Nixon obstructed justice by a series of actions that interfered with the investigation and prosecution of crimes growing out of the Watergate break-in and a cover-up and the burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's doctor.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A young abductor who was paid $50,000 ransom by his wealthy boss shot the executive and his wife to death in their expensive car, then pleaded "Don't shoot!" before surrendering to authorities, the FBI says. Slain were Sydney Gans, 64, owner of a prosperous paper bag company, and his 60-year-old wife, Lillian, who had been held hostage by the gunman. Authorities said Thomas Knight, 23, of Miami, taken into custody, was an employe of Gans' firm. He was charged with two counts of first-degree murder.

SWEDESBORO, N.J.(AP) — Migrant farm workers have helped New Jersey maintain its nickname, "Garden State," but their plight has given the state a black eye. The "migrant problem" flared into public view earlier this week when state Assemblyman Byron Baer's arm was broken in a melee at a migrant farm in this southern New Jersey community. He has advocated better living conditions for migrant workers. Baer had gone there to get a rare glimpse inside a New Jersey migrant labor farm. But Marcos Portalatin, the farm foreman accused of breaking Baer's arm, told The Associated Press the 11 workers there don't like "nosey" state officials.

Western Electric and AT&T to honor the picket lines. Workers in other locals in the state were expected to return to work today.

At midnight Wednesday 33 contracts covering 750,000 Bell employes expired. Neither the company's offer nor the union's demand was disclosed.

RHODE ISLAND — National Guardsmen and state troopers were ordered off duty in Cranston by Gov. Philip Noel, who announced a settlement Wednesday in the walkout of guards at the state prison in the town.

Some of the 247 guards walked off the job to protest what they felt was lenient handling of an inmate who had assaulted a guard. Noel fired the guards, triggering the full-scale strike two days ago.

He said he was assured by officials of the Brotherhood of Correctional Officers that future union policy would not include the use of job actions as a bargaining tactic.

Makarios given British support

LONDON (AP) — Armed with promises of British support, Archbishop Makarios flew off to New York today to ask the United Nations to condemn the Greek military junta for the coup that overthrew him.

He told newsmen he had Britain's assurance it would not recognize the new military regime on Cyprus.

"I was very satisfied with the talks I have had with the prime minister and the secretary of state," the bearded archbishop said of his meetings with Harold Wilson and James Callaghan, the British foreign minister.

"I found a great degree of understanding and I appreciate the British attitude on the situation in Cyprus.

"I appreciate their assurances that under no circumstances are they going to recognize the so-called new regime imposed by the junta of Greece upon the people of Cyprus."

The archbishop was expected to appear before the U.N. Security Council on Friday.

Small-member powers of the U.N. Security Council were circulating a proposed resolution. It reportedly called for the withdrawal from Cyprus of the Cypriot national guard's Greek officers who led the coup. It also expressed opposition to annexation of the island by Greece, which is believed to be the object of the coup.

While Makarios pressed his personal crusade, Britain and the United States were trying to ease the threat of an armed confrontation between Greece and Turkey. But even though both the easternmost members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization had put their armed forces on emergency alerts, American military officials in Washington said they believed an armed clash between Greece and Turkey was unlikely.

Joseph Sisco, President Nixon's special emissary, flew into the British capital for urgent talks with British and Turkish leaders on the Cyprus crisis.

On the Mediterranean island itself, the Cyprus national guard pressed a massive manhunt for left-wing politicians and others who supported Makarios.

More than 1,000 persons have been arrested since the guard's Greek officers led it in the revolt. Soldiers began house-tohouse searches in the capital of Nicosia and other cities, towns and villages on Wednesday.

Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit brought his defense and interior ministers to London, conferred late Wednesday night with Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Foreign Secretary James Callaghan and prepared to fly back to Ankara today for an emergency session of the Turkish parliament. There was no indication what the British told him they would do to prevent the 115,000 Turkish Cypriots being brought under Greek rule.

No more fighting was reported on Cyprus. The rebellious National Guard and its Greek officers apparently were in full control, and the international airport at Nicosia, the island's capital, reopened today to regular traffic for the first time since the upheaval.

EAST PRAIRIE — New personnel for the R-2 School District has been announced by Supt. Gerald McElrath, who said all positions for the 1974-75 school year have been filled.

New instructors and their positions include: Kathy Alsup, junior high English; Bill Beck, junior high social studies and head basketball coach; Paul Cannon, junior high industrial arts; Weatia Cannon, elementary learning disabilities; Myrna Carlisle, senior high English; Nancee Fields, Title I remedial reading; Judith DeLine Hathhorn, speech therapist.

McElrath acknowledged a gift of an organ to the music department from Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Hall of East Prairie. The instrument, to be housed in the high school, will be available to community groups using school facilities as well as for school activities.

Hall, presently an associate judge of the second distirct in Mississippi County and a candidate for re-election, served for many years on the Pinhook school board and the county board of education. He assisted in the reoganization of the county schools and served on the first school board at Locust Groves School for several years.

In donating the organ to the district, Mr. and Mrs. Hall each expressed their interest in area children learning to play the organ and developing their skill so they can play for churches and other organizations.

Approximately 200 students, grades one through eight, are attending the district's summer school program, which will close July 26. There are 20 teachers, five teacher aides and one nurse employed in the program which is designed to provide students, six months or more behind grade level, with the opportunity to acquire knowledge in reading and language arts.

McElrath said each class has 10 or less students and with individualized help from teachers, students are showing improvement in communicative skills in the areas of reading, spelling, listening and writing.

The district has also sponsored a migrant program this summer at the Dorena School. The six- week program will conclude July 26.

Other summer projects include the remodeling of a classroom for the new home economics department at the junior high school. Two complete kitchens, including washers and dryers, ranges, one range with a micro-wave oven, refrigerator with ice maker and disposals have been installed. Five new sewing machines have also been purchased. This year will be the first time the class will be offered to junior high students as a full qualified course with laboratory facilities.

Under the Title I program for economically and educationally deprived students, the district has purchased two mobile units which will be used for six classrooms. Remedial reading, language arts and

Someone apparently tried to set fire about 1:10 a.m. today to the rear wheels of a tractor- trailer truck parked at Caproco, Inc. on Industrial Drive.

The fire was discovered by a police officer.

Firemen said a bale of hay near the rear tires of a trailer was set afire. Firemen extinguished the blaze and there was no damage to the truck.

The 220 employes who are members of the International Upholsters Union are on strike at Caproco.

Firemen were called at 9:25 p.m. Wednesday to a grassfire at 205 N. Ingram Road. The fire spread to a flat bed trailer parked there before firemen could extinguish the fire. The trailer received minor damage.

Strike agreements send few to work

Tentative agreements have ended strikes of Rhode Island prison guards and 4,000 state employes in Ohio, but nearly a quarter of a million other Americans stayed away from work today as a result of labor disputes.

Communications workers authorized a strike vote against the Bell Telephone System and pickets marched at two airlines, Arizona copper mines, San Francisco bus garages, and a Minnesota snowmobile maker. Walkouts also affected municipal workers in hundreds of cities and private industry.

Labor experts say the strike surge swiftly followed the end of federal economic controls, and in most instances workers sought to fight inflation with wage hike demands that exceeded 10 per cent.

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said it has tallied more strikes than at any time since it began counting in 1959, with 230,000 workers involved in 588 strikes during the week that ended last Monday.

This was the labor scene early today:

TELEPHONES — The Communications Workers of America early today authorized a strike vote against the Bell Telephone System, but a union spokesman said talks would continue while the union's 500,000 members vote on the strike question over the next two weeks.

However, some 1,300 CWA members of Local 2001 in West Virginia went on strike and an official of the local expected 2,500 employes of

LET'S ASSIST
POLICE DEPENDENTS

Between 1969 and 1972, a total of 488 law enforcement officers in the United States lost their lives in the line of duty. In too many of the cases, widows were left with too little money to send their children to college.

Although no amount of money can lessen the heartache that comes from such a family tragedy, the country has an opportunity to assure that such children in the future will not be denied an education. Under a bill (S. 2657) now before the Senate, higher education scholarships would be given to dependents of public safety officials killed in the line of duty.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Frank E. Moss (D-Utah), would cover policemen, firemen, and prison guards. It would provide for payment of tuition, fees, books and room and board up to $3,500 annually.

The assistant chief of police in Salt Lake City, Dewey J. Fillis, testified recently before the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee on the Moss bill. "In most areas across the nation, with the exception of the larger cities, the salary of law enforcement officers is very low," said Fillis. "Should an officer meet his death, the family, particularly the wife, would only receive one-fourth the officer's salary."

Fillis added, "In our area that would amount to the meager sum of $250 a month — even less if the officer had not obtained the status of first grade patrolman." He noted that nearly half the policemen killed are young men with less than five years of experience on the force.

The Moss bill becomes even more significant in light of the increasing incidence of violence in America. During the past several years, for example, more than 60 officers have been killed after making routine traffic stops.

The nation, unfortunately, cannot remove the dangers, from law enforcement work. But we can — and should — provide for the education of those who are left fatherless through such tragedy.

THE CASE BUILDS
'Differences' don't enhance Nixon's chances

Some of the differences between the White House transcript of tapes of President Nixon's Watergate conversations and that released by the House Judiciary Committee are purely scatological, but others, it appears, cannot be dismissed so lightly.

The committee's release of its version of the transcripts drew the immediate fire of Ronald L. Ziegler, President Nixon's press secretary. Among other things, he said publications of the committee transcripts was "an effort of the committee to divert attention from the fact that there is no case against the President."

We can't go along with Ziegler's view. A least two passages in the committee's version, it seems clear to us, present some rather damning evidence that Mr. Nixon had in mind obstructing justice.

One of these, as quoted in the committee version of the transcript, has the President telling his counsel, John Dean: "... I want you all to stonewall it, let them plead the Fifth Amendment, cover-up or anything else if it'll save the plan. That's the whole point. On the other hand, uh, uh, I would prefer, as I said to you, that you do it the other way."

From the contest, it is evident that "the plan" refers to a cover-up plan to conceal White House involvement in Watergate. "The other way" would be to have witnesses tell the Senate Watergate committee part of the story, "if it's going to come out anyway," but not all of it, by any means.

In either case, it is obvious that Mr. Nixon didn't want to be entirely frank with the Senate committee, or with the American people about White House involvement in the affair. It is equally obvious that, based on that attitude, the House Judiciary Committee could argue, with some justification, that the President was guilty of at least wanting to obstruct justice.

The other passage dealt with Mr. Nixon's reaction to a proposal to pay off E. Howard Hunt, who apparently had demanded $120,000 as the price for his silence on the Watergate affair.

The House committee's version of the conversation between the President and Dean on March 21, 1973, contains this quote from Mr. Nixon: "Don't you agree that you'd better get the Hunt thing? I mean, that's worth it, at the moment." The second sentence of that quotation was not in the White House version which was made public.

The portion that to us seems especially damaging to the President's case is the phrase "that's worth it."

For the rest, the House committee transcript differed from that released by the White House mainly in that it included a considerable number of words and phrases which, in the White House version, had been covered by the phrases "expletive deleted" or "characterization deleted."

Their inclusion does nothing to bolster the President's reputation of being a man who shuns profanity, but we rather doubt that it will do any further damage to him so far as the general public is concerned. Anyone who read the edited version of the transcripts made public by the White House very likely read the deleted words into them, anyway.

Incidentally, members of the Senate Watergate committee did not appear to be very surprised by the new evidence made public in the House committee transcript. They had, they indicated, already deduced that an attempt to coverup was on. Sen. Sam Ervin, the committee chairman, said: "The plan (of the White House) was to pretend in public to cooperate, but at the same time to do everything possible to obstruct and impede the committee's investigation."

Whether the new transcripts have little impact on the public or the Senate panel or not, we consider that, despite Ziegler's protestations, they greatly strengthen the case for Mr. Nixon's impeachment.

A SINISTER TREND

On the theory that prices of cold cerals could be reduced 10 to 12 percent, the government is moving to break up what it calls a monopoly in the cereal industry. Reducing the price of a box of breakfast cereal a few cents is hardly a matter of great import in these days of two-bit dollars. Yet, the drive is on, and it involves far more than the question of monopoly.

As one observeer suggests, "It hints of a broad-based and formidable attack on existing business fundamentals in many industries..." It is a new type of campaign to remake the business system, supposedly for the benefit of consumers. To help with the job, a bill has been introduced in Congress entitled the Corporation Control Act. A sponsor of the bill calls it "a sweeping revision in antitrust law enforcement" which has the purpose of insuring "the maintenance of competition within a truly free enterprise system."

One may well wonder just how much free enterprise will be left when companies like the breakfast cereal makers have to justify their existence. The $650 million cereal business is highly competitive. Profits of four leading companies in 1971 averaged 5 percent on sales which is modest indeed. They have 137,980 stockholders and 109,500 employees. As part of the U.S. business system. they have been important contributors to the economy of the nation and to the support of government as taxpayers. The fact that they must now prove their right to stay in business indicates as nothing else could the need for a better understanding of what business does, why it does it and who benefits from it.

THE SOLZHENITSYN CASE IS NOT CLOSED

The expulsion of dissident author Alexander Solzhenitsyn appears to have been a brilliant stroke by the Kremlin. Western intellectuals note with chagrin that the wave of outrage that swept the world in the wake of the action has ebbed as quickly as it began. Diplomatic repercussions seem to have been nil.

More adverse publicity may be in store for the Soviet regime when translations of Solzhenitsyn's expose of Stalinist terror, "The Gulag Archipelago," come out in the West. Even so, it will have gained very much and lost very little— at least in the short run — by ridding itself of a prominent figure who was attacking the very ideological underpinnings of the Soviet style of socialism.

This should not be surprising. Bold, lightning strokes have paid off for the Kremlin in the past — the quelling of the revolution in Hungary in 1956 and the incipient revolution in Czechoslovakia in 1968, in both cases by massive armed invasion. Compared to these brutal events, the exiling of Solzhenitsyn and his family appears positively benign.

Yet it all mounts up. Each exposure of the true face of communism in Russia has cost the Kremlin dearly. Today, only the most radical or naive socialists outside the Soviet Union still look to it as the "motherland" or model of Marxist revolution. It is seen for what it is, a dictatorial, nationalistic power even more repressive of human freedom than was Russia in the days of the czars.

In the Soviet Union itself, bootleg copies of "The Gulag Archipelago" are being worn out by intense circulation among intellectuals and young people.

By physically removing Solzhenitsyn, the Kremlin may have solved its immediate problem. But the man's ideas and the truths he proclaimed continue to have a life of their own, and an influence on the younger generation of Russians who effects no one can now foresee.

WOMAN'S LOGIC

The luggage-laden husband stared miserably down the platform at the departing train. "If you hadn't taken so long getting ready we would have caught it."

"Yes," the little woman rejoined, "and if you hadn't hurried me so we wouldn't have so long to wait for the next one!"

HIGHWAY SAFETY

A definite trend is being established in highway traffic safety. Losses in human life are being reduced. An example of this pattern can be found in the fatality figures posted for the past July Fourth holiday. Traffic authorities revealed that the fatality rate was cut by almost one third. Officers said 511 persons died in traffic accidents this Fourth while 758 had been killed in 1972. (1972 was selected for a comparison year since it was the last one involving a four-day weekend.)

Most experts in the traffic field attributed the reduction in loss of life to the nation-wide cutback of speed limits to 55 miles per hour, a step taken to conserve fuel during the worst of the energy crisis. Speed, traffic authorities say, determines the extent of injuries and the reduction in the fatality rate seems to confirm their belief.

Deaths, injuries and property damage due to traffic have sometimes been referred to as "our national disgrace." It may not be that bad but the yearly losses were nothing to be proud of, certainly. Human suffering and financial losses are the big factors in the highway picture, but it should be remembered that mounting traffic problems have taken thousands of police man-hours away from the war on crime. As the traffic problem rose, so did the crime problem.

The 55- mile speed limit probably is unpopular with some motorists but the safety it is inducing makes the law a good thing. Ironically, those who oppose the reduced speed limit may some day owe their lives to it. HLH.

THE NEWS ON THE BEACH

EAST HAMPTON, N.Y. — Many people are discovering this summer that it isn't (ital) what(unital) you read but (ital) where(unital) you read it that counts. This was dramatically illustrated last weekend at East Hampton, Long Island. I was lying on the beach and the only thing between me and the Atlantic Ocean was a young lady in her 20s trying to get a suntan. In order to do this she lay on her stomach with the top half of her bathing suit undone. This, I assumed, was so that she would get an even tan. As long as she stayed in her position there was nothing to see but her back. But you never know what can happen on a beach.

"I see," my wife said reading the paper, "that the failure of the SALT talks means that both superpowers are going to go full steam ahead on offensive missiles."

"What a pity," I said. As I saw it, my best bet would be if some little kid ran by and accidentally showered sand on the girl forcing her to turn her body to find out what was going on.

My wife turned a page. "The bank rates are up to 12¼% and now they're predicting they'll go to 13%. Herb Stein, the President's economic adviser, says the only one to blame for inflation is the American people. Do you think we're really responsible?"

"If he says so," I replied. There was another hope. If some bather came out of the ocean wringing wet and dropped water on her back, the shock of it might make the girl sit up.

"The White House transcripts don't jell with the ones released by the House Judiciary Committee," my wife read. "Mr. Nixon certainly looks like he knew a lot more about Watergate than he admitted. Why is it taking them so long to impeach him?"

"That's a good question," I answered. My only other hope would be a cloudburst. The icy raindrops would certainly make her panic.

"It says here," my wife continued, "that Mr. Nixon's strategy, if the Supreme Court makes him turn over the tapes, will be to stonewall Jaworski, by saying it will take a lot of time to find the tapes and edit them. In that way the House Judiciary Committee won't have time to hear all the evidence before they're forced to vote. All he's doing is stalling. Doesn't it make you furious?"

"Live and let live I always say."

"You don't seem very excited about the news," my wife said.

"I am, I am. Why is Mr. Nixon stonewalling Herb Stein?"

"He isn't stonewalling Stein; he's stonewalling Jaworski."

"Hmmmn," I said. The dear girl seemed to be asleep. My only hope now was that she'd have a bad dream and wake up startled.

My wife continued reading the paper out loud. "The National Football League strike is still on. You might not be able to see the Redskins this fall."

"If you've seen one football game you've seen them all," I muttered.

"Are you all right?" she asked.

"I'm fine. My neck hurts a little from the sun."

"You know," my wife said, "she's (tal) not (unital) going to move."

"Who?" I pretended to be surprised.

"That topless floozie over there." She folded up her newspaper neatly. "Anyway even if she moved, it wouldn't have done you any good."

"Why not?"

"Because," she said sweetly, "I would have kicked sand in your eyes."

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: FDA Taking New Look Into Fluoride's Effects

WASHINGTON — Half of America today drinks fluoridated water to avert cavities. Yet federal authorities are suddenly taking another belated look at its safety and effectiveness.

This could revive the great fluoridation controversy of 20 years ago, although the authorities are going about it coolly and quietly.

The flouride fighers of the 1950s regarded the addition of fluoride to drinking water as a "Communist plot" to brainwash the American people.

For those who have forgotten or are too young to remember, there really were "little old ladies in tennis shoes" passing out pamphlets in the aisles of New York subways. There were town marches and angry campaigns. The Daughters of the American Revolution were aghast.

But gradually, the tide turned. The Public Health Service led the fight for fluoridation. Congressional hearings in 1961 seemed to show fluoride was safe and didn't build up in the body.

In 1961, 70 communities turned to fluoride. Another 100 added fluoride to their tap water in 1962.

The fluoride fighters all but fell apart in 1966 when they lost their final battle in New York City. American dentists helped sound the death knell by putting their official seal on fluoridated Crest, to the envy and outrage of less resourceful dentifrice peddlers.

Soon the doughty Daughters stood almost alone, with last- ditch, antifluoride fanatics manning mimeo machines. But a few worried scientists had their own private reservations. Within the last few days, the Food and Drug Administration has taken some careful, tentative steps to reconsider fluoridation.

The FDA is moving at the insistence of a California Institute of Technology biologist who is so reluctant to make his findings public that he begged us to kill this story. The quiet scientist is Dr. Edward Groth III, whose hesitant conclusions come from study of 1,000 papers and countless abstracts, books, summaries and scientific publications.

On June 3, with much hedging and apology, Groth wrote to Dr. Lloyd Tepper, FDA's energetic associate commissioner, himself a student of anti- cavity additives.

"I must admit to being a bit reluctant to write to you on this subject," he told Tepper, "since I do not want to get into a position of supporting the opponents of fluoridation, with whom I have little sympathy."

Groth said he recognized that the body of research seeming to "support the effectiveness and safety of fluoridation is enormous. And there is an apparently overwhelming consensus among experts that (fluoridation) reduces dental caries some 60 per cent, without any adverse effects on any person."

That duly acknowledged, Groth proceeds to make a devastating case for reopening the files on fluoridation.

For one thing, he observes, the Public Health Service was involved in a gigantic conflict of interest at the time of the fluoride fever.

The fluoridation idea, as Groth explains it, "was developed by the dental branch of PHS, and the evaluation of the adequacy of the evidence was conducted primarily by PHS scientists and by other outside scientists who were also very much involved in the development and promotion of the measure.

The key studies, said Groth, lacked even "the most basic elements of 'blind' design" which ensure total objectivity. Besides, factors such as the subjects' dental care, diet and fluoride intake were never even cranked into the studies, he reported.

More ominously, Groth wrote, "there is still not adequate evidence, despite numerous statements from high places to the contrary, that (fluoridation) is without appreciable risk."

All these considerations were brushed aside 20 years ago because of "the political controversy which swirled around fluoridation." The heat of the debate "made it expedient to have as firm a scientific statement as possible, and as early in the game as possible," Groth concluded.

When Tepper got the letter, he told us he decided that "we could not just push it aside. It comes with credentials of a high order." Not only Groth, he explained, but some of his elders, including two well-known biologists and a pharmacologist, are also concerned about the long range effects of fluoridation.

"We definitely have made no conclusions, but we are going to look into the issue," he told us.

Groth, who had hoped the new fluoridation controversy could be handled within the scientific community, told us: "I'm keeping my fingers crossed. I don't want it to lead to more choosing up sides."

Footnote: Groth has at least one powerful ally in Washington. Ralph Nader tells us he has been worried about the inadequacy of follow- up tests on fluoride intake for years. He blames the FDA for footdragging on a definitive nationwide survey.

Inside Labor
by Victor Riesel

Could Paralyze Nation: Drive to weld country's Civil Service Workers into huge new Labor Movement

WASHINGTON — In some cities public employe union members haven't buried the dead. Or gathered the garbage. Or guarded prisons. Or patrolled mental institutions. Or have been battling the police. That is, where the police haven't been striking. National Guard units have been thrown into the streets. It's a very proletarian push.

But the public's seen nothing yet. Marching side by side with the garbage men, the cops, the prison guards and blue- collar workers are the people's white- collar employes.

It's a new militancy. It's well directed -- mostly by a coalition which has escaped much notice. Behind most of the street action are two of the nation's largest labor organizations -- totaling 2.2 million members.

They've launched a drive for a new trade union center -- to match in the public sector, meaning state, county and municipal employes, what the AFL- CIO is in the private sector (auto, steel, rubber, garment, etc.).

Don't make light of it. In the agitational tornado's eye is the aggressive Jerry Wurf, national AFL-CIO vice president, president of the 700,000- member American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees and dynamo of the still low-profiled (but not for long) Coalition of American Public Employees (CAPE).

Working shoulder to shoulder with Wurf in CAPE is the 35- year- old Terry Herndon, executive secretary of the newly militant 1.5 million- strong National Education Assn. (NEA). For about 110 of its 112- year- old existence the NEA has been a prissy school teachers professional organization. Today they're on the march. In the final hours of its massive convention (9,711 delegates, in Chicago) just as the Fourth of July holiday set in, the NEA called for a new "formal, national organization to be a trade union center in the public labor sector." Convention orators called for unionizing 12 million public employes (including federal job holders).

Organizationally CAPE leaders have with them not only these two huge outfits but also the 200,000- member National Treasury Employees Union. And CAPE's executive director, Ralph Flynn, a close working partner of Herndon's, says, "And now we're going after the 300,000- member American Nurses Assn., the 150,000- member American Assn. of University Professors, the 325,000- member American Federation of Government Employees (AFL-CIO) and two big postal unions."

No whimsy this. Already there's an operational headquarters in CAPE's midtown national offices here. And this is the year, says Flynn, when Herndon, Wurf and the rest will continue to set up CAPEs in "all states." Already there are CAPE centers in 11 states, including Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Maryland and Connecticut.

Soon 1.5 million hospital workers will be eilgible for unionization -- and strikes. Soon a bill will give municipal employes the right to strike -- similar to what is called the "Canadian alterantive." The public employes can choose either to shut down a city or go to arbitration.

There's a bill round the corner which would give federal employes the right to strike. This isn't just a phrase. It would give the unions the power to shut down the postal system, air control towers, government departments. You name it.

So "civil service" workers are on the march. Soon enough they'll be able to strike as regularly as airline and auto workers. Police could too. Actually many national public employe union chiefs have been encouraged in their demand for job action by recent speeches delivered by special presidential labor adviser Bill Usery, Federal Mediation director. Those speeches sound mighty like Bill has been handing out the right to strike to police and federal employees, said one White House adviser the other day.

There's more there than garbage- laden streets or possible pickets waving placards in Congressmen's faces on the Hill some day.

To steal a phrase, this is the strike wave of the future -- and the mobilized labor power of the swift '70s.

There are some 10 million non- federal public employes. Many of them are black, They range all the way from sanitation workers to skilled engineers, scientists and professors of Latin. Now, says the Wurf- Herndon- Flynn coalition, the time has come to move. The AFL-CIO isn't, so we will. They might succeed.

This would create a dual labor center. CAPE officials say there's no conflict between such a movement and the AFL-CIO. Well, Wurf's union has police. So has the Service Employees International. Wurf has state road workers. So has the Laborers' international. The conflict will roil the AFL-CIO high command, the Executive Council, on which Wurf sits.

He isn't about to take his 700,000 members out of the "Federation" as did the late Walter Reuther. But neither is he pledging he won't take a walk. On the outside are forces closer to him and Herndon than those inside "16th Street" (AFL-CIO headquarters here). There is Leonard Woodcock's United Auto Workers union and Arnold Miller's United Mine Workers. Wurf is an iconoclastic tumulter.

The story is back to the home front. Millions are waiting for leaders, he believes. And CAPE thinks it has the capability to weld them into a marching mass movement. Could be.

Rotary told of industrial park needs

Jim Beaird and Charles Mitchell, representing the Sikeston Industrial Development Crop., addressed the Sikeston Rotary Club Monday night at the Ramada Inn on the needs of community effort in industrial development.

Beaird noted that a number of Rotarians were involved in relatively new and growing business concerns as well as expansion of established businesses.

Beaird and Mitchell indicated that industries are interested in locating in cities the size of Sikeston and that Sikeston gets about two inquiries per week concerning possible location of new industries.

Before Sikeston can become competitive for new industry three things should occur, Beaird and Mitchell reported.

An industrial park should be developed. There are 15 available sites in and near Sikeston and the land is fairly priced.

An industrial building of about 50,000 to 60,000 square feet needs to be erected.

The city needs to employ a person to be responsible for industrial development.

Rotarian Ken Williams announced that the annual Rotary auction would be next month and the project needs white elephant items. Anyone wishing to donate a white elephant item should call 471-3614 or 471-4659 for pick up service.

Rotarians on Saturdays will collect white elephant items which will be stored in the Federal Compress Building until auction time.

Williams also stated that Rotary will issue fair price receipts for White Elephant items for tax deduction purposes for the donor.

Ann Landers

Paperwork causes assembly-line doctors

Dear Ann Landers: I read your recent article in Prism magazine with great interest. Unfortunately, you are correct when you say physicians frequently fail to give enough time to patients who need to be listened to. In self defense, I would like to point out a few facts that make it virtually impossible for most doctors to "listen."

The average doctor works between 60 and 70 hours a week. Ten to 15 hours a week are spent on a deluge of paperwork, foisted on us by various government agencies, insurance carriers, attorneys, etc.

The increased demands on the doctor to see the sick have forced him into "assembly-line medicine" which goes against his ethical standards. Most of us are resentful and hostile to the regulations being imposed on us by governmental agencies that view us as money-hungry, uninterested and often incompetent. This harassment leads to a deterioration of the doctor-patient relationship.

As your poll and other polls have shown, the vast majority of patients regard their doctors as honest and sympathetic -- not Cadillac-driving, golf-playing, vacationaing money-machines.

I would be happy to spend an additional 15 hours a week with patients who need to be listened to, but there is a limit to the physical endurance of any man. So long as we are tied up in this morass of Paperwork, we cannot possibly be the "Sir Galahad, Albert Schweitzer and Marcus Welby" you wish we were. -- Anthony J. Croce, M.D. of N.J.

Dear Dr. Croce: I agree, the load of paperwork forced on physicians today is outrageous. Moreover, as you say, it devours valuable time that could be better spent taking care of sick people.

I wish I had some answers, but alas, I have none. Medicare, Medicaid, Blue Cross, Blue Shield and other insurance plans are here to stay and the paperwork will most assuredly go on. It's one of the built-in curses that comes with social change and bureaucracy.

Not all doctors are as dedicated as you, however. Some do NOT give the patients one extra minute and don't feel that they should. (I hear plenty about them from my readers.) But please know I'm in there pitching for the thousands of fine physicians who are doing a wonderful job under extremely difficult circumstances. Their patients adore them.

Dear Ann Landers: May I respond to "Sick at Heart" (and not too smart), whose heart aches for a sister who is losing her husband to the office sexpot? She said, "Sis is intelligent and attractive, an immaculate housekeeper, a great cook, an example of motherhood's truest flower. She even shines her husband's shoes."

Shoes ain't where it's at, booby. I'm married to a woman who has all those qualities. The only thing this paragon of perfection lacks is the willingness to be an active participant in that one, very significant aspect of marriage which distinguishes a wife from a paid housekeeper.

It doesn't take a sexpot to hit my switches. Willing and woman will do. Cheers to you, Ann, for telling her so. -- Hungry

Dear Hungry: And cheers to you for an on-target letter. I hope your wife recognizes herself and opts in favor of expending less energy waxing the floors and channels it into more rewarding endeavors.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach; Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged by Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654.

Births of test tube babies result of hard work, luck

NEW YORK (AP) — The births of three babies conceived in laboratory test tubes and then implanted in the mothers' wombs apparently were the result of scientific research and a little bit of luck.

The feat, reported in Britain on Monday, eventually could benefit women unable to have children because of blocked fallopian tubes. Nevertheless, it raises questions and controversy.

Prof. Douglas Bevis of Leeds University said the achievement of fertilizing a woman's eggs in the laboratory did not constitute a breakthrough.

Dr. Bevis said the problem with the technique is preparing the womb so that it will not reject the fertilized egg.

He said the three births had been successful not because of any medical break-through, but because of luck. "So many have been attempted that by the law of averages some have come through," he said.

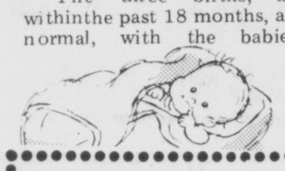
Most such attempts at conception fail because the fertilized egg is flushed out of the lining of the womb when the woman has her next period. Doctors are trying to find the secret of how they can deceive the womb into a pregnant state so the egg can implant itself and grow.

In the United States, a government health official agreed, saying, "They apparently have been lucky." He said he believes there has not yet been enough animal research to justify trying the procedure on humans.

Proposed federal guidelines for human experiments in the United States, issued last fall, recommended that the procedure not be done, pending a demonstration of safety through animal study. The proposed guidelines are awaiting the findings of a special commission studying the subject.

Bevis told the British Medical Association the babies were conceived in a test tube with eggs taken from the mother's ovaries, fertilized with male sperm and after about a week implanted in the womb. From then on the pregnancy proceeded normally, he said.

The three births, all within the past 18 months, are normal, with the babies showing no sign of abnormality, he said.



The announcement emphasized the developing genetic and biological revolution, as scientists work to bring man closer to new controls over human life.

Fertilizing an egg in the test tube, for example, could lead to determining the sex of the embryo before implantation into the mother. Depending on the preference for a boy or girl, a fertilized egg could be discarded if it were not the choice.

A woman could hire another woman to do the work of growing a baby from her eggs, to cite another possibility. Whose baby would such a baby be?

This kind of research might lead to the ability to correct genetic defects before implantation, thus eliminating some diseases.

But laboratory manipulation could possibly result in the introduction of abnormalities and implantation of abnormal embryos of the kind that would be aborted spontaneously under normal conditions, some scientists have suggested.

Dr. Leon R. Kass, a physician and biochemist who has warned in the past about the dangers inherent in laboratory manipulation of life, said there can be "legitimate, humane" uses for various techniques, such as allowing a woman whose fallopian tubes are blocked to have children.

However, when looked at "in the aggregate," including such topics as surrogate or hired mothers, there is cause for concern about the dangers of abuse and a possible challenge to the very nature of human reproduction, he said.

To treat a burn, quickly submerge the area in cold water — not ice cold, but below room temperature. Keep it there until it can be taken out without pain. Or apply a series of cold packs to the burn, changing them steadily. If the burn is severe, don't take the time for first-aid, but rush the patient to a hospital.

Jr. stars champs

DEXTER — The Sikeston Jr. Babe Ruth all-stars waltzed through the district baseball tournament undefeated, claiming a 7-3 win over Jackson in the championship Wednesday night.

Dale Deal was selected as the events most valuable player after hitting over .500 during the week long event.

Sikeston's stars enter the state tournament at Chaffee next week.

Don Francis fashioned a five hitter to claim the win and got nine hit backing from his teammates.

Jackson jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the third inning, bunching three hits, including a triple off the bat of Williams and a double from Niswonger to take the lead.

Sikeston battled back with a three run rally in the fourth, connecting for four hits after going hitless through the first three frames. Russell and Dale Deal sparked the inning with towering doubles.

Sikeston finished off their opponents in the sixth with a four run frame on three hits, including doubles off the bats of Dale Dea and Scott Scherer, who led the team's nine hit attack with two safties apiece.

Jackson made a last ditch effort at the undefeated leads by scoring one run in the seventh.

A&B, Security prevail

Brashears took A & B's 5-1 win against Pizza Inn and Security National rolled over Lewis Furniture 16-4 in National League action Wednesday night.

Brashears also starred in A & B's hitting attack with a two for two performance at the plate. Pizza Inn showed powerful hitting with two-base hits by Blow and Nanney and a single by Gary Laseter, but it was downhill all the way after the first inning.

Rodgers cracked a double for Security National in other action, but two-base hits by Lasters and Leonard and Garner's single were not enough to overpower Lewis Furniture.

Williams took the wound win in that game.

To get off the ground in the United States, soccer has been flying high in much of the world for some time — and so have its players. Martin Hoffman (top photo) of East Germany, recently "headed" this point into the net to earn his country a tie with the Chilean team. Another "headed" shot (bottom) by West Germany's Gerd Muller clinched his team's 3-0 win against Australia.

Bridger romps

Bridger upset Righter Trucking 26-3 in a one-sided American League match Wednesday night.

McKinney struck out 10 to win the two-hitter against Wolferding. Eckles and McCoy each cracked doubles for Bridger's win. Wolferding powered a double in his one for one plate performance, and Price managed the only other hit for Righter.

Gibson makes it

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The night was to have belonged to the St. Louis Cardinals' Bob Gibson, but George Foster didn't know.

Foster, a Cincinnati Reds outfielder, also had no knowledge of what he hit in the 12th inning, but his blow beat the Cards 6-4.

"All I know is I'm sure it was a breaking ball," admitted Foster, whose two-out double lifted the Reds 5½ games behind the Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West.

And, in so doing, it spoiled the momentous occasion of Gibson's 3,000th major league strikeout.

The 38- year- old Gibson , making his 279th consecutive appearance as a starter, blazed a fast ball past the Reds' Cesar Geronimo in the second inning to become only the second in history to reach the 3,000 level.

In joining Walter Johnson, who had 3,508, he also fanned Reds starting pitcher Tom Carroll and set down Geronimo on a called third strike in the fourth.

But after fanning Johnny Bench for his 3,003rd strikeout in the seventh, Gibson was lifted for a pinch-hitter amid groans from a crowd of 28,743.

"I thought he was getting a little tired," explained Cards Manager Red Schoendienst.

"He was also leading off the inning, and I thought we might get a run."

The Cards failed to score with the maneuver, however, and Gibson left with the score tied 4-4 as a victim of poor support.

"Our defense was bad," Schoendienst said. "We gave them all but one run behind him, and we should have had a double play on one."

Cincinnati, sweeping the three- game series, took an early lead against Gibson on Bench's run- scoring single in the opening inning and an unearned run in the second.

But Carroll, plagued by wildness, walked Reggie Smith and Ted Simmons to start thyCards second and Joe Torre powered his sixth home run.

Smith also picked on a Carroll changeup for his 13th homer and a 4-2 St. Louis lead an inning later, then Gibson's luck again soured.

Dan Driessen's routine fly to left fieldbecame a double when Lou Brock lost it in the lights and Ken Griffey's vicious grounder eluded Simmons at first base to score a fourth- inning run.

The 4-4 tie was forged when, with two out in the Reds' sixth, Dave Concepcion singled and scored after Griffy walked on Terry Crowley's pinch hit.

In at least partial sympathy with Gibson was Bench, who noted, "He had a hard slider and a hard breaking ball.

"Both clubs had beautiful relief," remarked Bench, whose accurate throw eliminated a potential St. Louis run following a Reds error in the 10th. "They worked out of more tough situations than we did."

Mike Garman and Rich Folkers escaped Cincinnati threats in the 10th and 11th before Folkers, 2-1, faltered in the 12th.

Darrel Chaney drew a one-out walk and Concepcion again singled, then Foster drilled an Orlando Pena delivery on a line past Brock in left.

"It was a slider," Pena later revealed in the Cards' clubhouse. "I missed on the first pitch I threw him and I thought I could get by with it."

Smith wins 9th

Mark Littell of Gideon returned to action for the Omaha Royals in the American Association last week after being sidelined with an injury and worked only three innings before being handed his fifth defeat of the season.

Littell was hit in the arm with a line drive and was sidelined two weeks and was tagged for five hits and five walks in three innings. His ERA ballooned to 3.15.

Randy Smith of Arbyrd, playing for the Salinas Angles in the California class A league, claimed his ninth victory of the season last week and lowered his ERA to 2.90.

Puxico's Galen McSpadden, playing with the Walla Walla Padres in the Northwest class A league, continued to find the going rough in pro ball as he lost his second game. The former Southeast Missouri State University star went five innings, allowed seven hits and three walks. His ERA ballooned to 3.43.

Steve Coulson of Fisk had a big week with the bat, collecting 11 hits in 30 times at bat for a 3.67 average to raise his season total to .281. He's playing with the West Haven Yanks in the Eastern division class AA league.

Former laborer says American Dream not dead

EORIA, Ill. (AP) — Big John Robinson, who rose from a $1-a-day field hand to run a barbecue business grossing $500,000 a year, doesn't believe the American Dream is dead.

"It can be done," said Robinson. "You see it can be done. I did it and my wife did it. Work — I believe that's the only way to get ahead if you wasn't born rich."

As a teen-ager, Robinson sweated in the Mississippi cottonfields from sunup to sunset. He came to Peoria in the 1940s, rented a small room for $7 a week, and got a job as a butcher for 65 cents an hour.

Today, Robinson owns the building containing his old room. He buys two new custom luxury cars a year; has his suits made by a Chicago tailor, and displays with pride his 19-room living quarters.

Robinson was recently named Illinois small businessman of the year by the federal Small Business Administration.

"I like nice things," he says. "I like nice cars, nice suits. I like to build things. And my wife, that was my whole life, working hard to get her things she really wanted. So she's doing it today."

Robinson was born on a Mississippi farm to a 14-year-old mother who died when he was five. He was brought up by the white owner of the farm, where he learned a recipe for barbecue sauce from an aging one-eyed cook.

In 1949, Robinson, while working as a butcher, spent about six months and $300 constructing a small take-out restaurant in Peoria. At first he only had enough money to buy 15 pounds of ribs at a time, which he picked up by bicycle.

The hours have been long and in 25 years Robinson has taken only three weeks of vacation.

But today Big John's Bar-B-Q pit employs 11 persons, has three delivery trucks, a large catering van, dining facilities and on a good day sells 900 pounds of ribs.

Although he is black, Robinson generally has refrained from joining black community organizations. He said that had brought some criticism.

"If I don't lean to one organization or race then no one's got nothing to point at me and say, 'You're just a one-race guy,'" he said.

He also disagrees with the argument that the disadvantaged have no chance to get ahead.

"I found out some of them are actually lazy. They really don't want to work," he said. "That's the problem with the whole world. Today people want something for nothing."

What's the law?

The case of the sleepy village

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Podunk was a little village that exhibited all the exuberance of perpetual siesta time -- with one exception. Cars zipped through the main intersection of the slow-moving village like they were in an old Keystone Kop movie that had been speeded up.

Consequently, when two motorists collided right smack in the middle of the hectic intersection, both drivers sued the village for their injuries.

"The village was negligent," they insisted, "in not having installed traffic controls. Going through that intersection was like playing Russian roulette."

"While it might have been a dangerous crossing," conceded a village official, "traffic controls couldn't be put up because the village never authorized them. And, logically, if they were never authorized, the village can't be held liable for not doing something it wasn't authorized to do."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the sleepy village liable for not having installed the needed controls?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that while a village may be held liable for carelessly failing to maintain traffic controls, it may not be held liable for its neglect or refusal to install them in the first place.

(Based upon a 1964 Illinois Appellate Court Decision)

Farm accidents took 2,200 lives in 1973

CHICAGO — Approximately 2,200 people were killed in agricultural accidents in 1973, according to preliminary estimates by the National Safety Council. About 1,500 of the victims were residents of farms and ranches, and the remaining 700 were non-residents. Although the final totals have not been confirmed for 1973, little change is expected from 1972.

The 2,200 accidental agricultural work deaths are part of an estimated 14,200 total work deaths in all occupations.

A total of more than 6,000 farm and ranch residents died in accidents last year. More than half of these, however, were victims of traffic mishaps. Farm work accidents ranked second as a cause of accidental deaths to farm people, followed by home and all public nonmotor-vehicle accidents.

In addition, agricultural work accidents resulted in an estimated 200,000 disabling injuries, many of which involved permanent disability ranging from loss of a part of a finger to complete incapacitation.

About three quarters of the injured workers resided on farms and ranches. Farm machinery, falls, animals, and hand and power tools were believed to be major factors in the fatal and non-fatal work injury totals. The farm and ranch home was found to be the most frequent site of non-fatal injuries.

The cost of accidents (including fire) to farm people is now approaching $3 billion annually in the United States.

Letters to the Editor

July 12, 1974

Dear Sir:

Would you please print the following?

Upon learning of the death of Mrs. Doloras Deane of Matthews, I would like to pass on a few kind words in her behalf. She will be missed by many I am sure, as thru the years I lived in Matthews she never was too busy to lend a helping hand. She did so many good deeds expecting nothing in return. Regardless of her heavy burden trying to support a large family she always had tome to help others in time of need. Even tho' her path in life was sometimes dark never once did we hear her complain!

The last time I talked to her, she said, "I hope I have done some good along life's way."

This she surely has done!

I personally have suffered a great loss.

Thank you
Sincerely,
Martha (Trail) Roderick

TERRY KNIGHT BUYS A JET

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock group manager Terry Knight has bought a $1 million private jet which will be made available for charter to touring rock groups.

Knight said the plane, which carries six passengers and 1,000 pounds of baggage, including guitars, will be available for charter in August. It is being built for him in Wichita.

Knight has become a jet pilot but says he will not personally fly any of the artists chartering his plane.

Boonville man elected to heart fund board

Norman Odneal of Boonville was elected to a three-year term of the Missouri Heart Association Board of Directors at the 25th Annual Meeting recently at the Ramada Inn in Columbia. His term began July 1.

An active heart fund campaign worker since 1968, Odneal is heart fund treasurer for Cooper County. He is assistant treasurer and manager of the Kemper State Bank's drive-in facility.

"It will soon cost more than a penny to make a penny," says Frank H. MacDonald, deputy director of the Mint.

The first telephone was installed in the White House by President Rutherford B. Hayes who took office in 1877.

Today in U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, July 18, the 199th day of 1974. There are 166 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in the year 64 A.D., the Great Fire of Rome began. The legend is that Emperor Nero set the fire and fiddled as the city burned.

On this date:

In 1776, New Jersey declared itself independent of British authority.

In 1792, the American naval hero, John Paul Jones, died in poverty in Paris.

In 1914, the U.S. Army created an aviation section within the Signal Corps, and six planes were made available for air training.

In 1932, the United States and Canada signed a treaty to develop the St. Lawrence Seaway.

In 1940, a Democratic National Convention in Chicago nominated President Franklin Roosevelt for a third term.

In 1969, a car driven by U.S. Senator Edward Kennedy plunged off a bridge into a tidal pool on Chappaquiddick Island, Mass. The body of Mary Jo Kopechne was found in the car.

Ten years ago: Thousands of blacks rioted in New York's Harlem after the shooting of a young black by a policeman.

Five years ago: The Central American country of El Salvador accepted a four-point peace plan to end an undeclared war with neighboring Honduras.

One year ago: The U.S. announced the end of minesweeping operations in North Vietnamese waters.

Today's birthdays: Astronaut John Glenn is 53. Comedian Red Skelton is 61.

Thought for today: Where there is no vision, the people perish—the Bible.

2 arrested for speeding

Police today announced two arrests, both for speeding. They were Jerry Lee Gater, 315 Sunset Ave., and Craig Joseph Welker of Perryville.

News Brief

LONDON (AP) — British police put stronger security measures in force today after a bomb explosion in the Tower of London that killed one woman and injured 37 persons. It was the fourth bomb in England in four days, and the police believed all were set by the Irish Republican Army. Guards were strengthened at places of entertainment and government buildings. The public was warned to watch for letter bombs or abandoned parcels in railway and subway stations and car parks. Scotland Yard appealed to tourists who were taking pictures at the Tower Wednesday around the time of the explosion to contact them.

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Tougher and more decisive government appeared to be in store for Portugal today as military men took over seven cabinet posts, including the key ministries of interior, labor and information. President Antonio de Spinola Wednesday night announced the new cabinet headed by Col. Vasco Goncalves as premier. Although nine of the 16 cabinet members are civilians, and they include the heads of the Communist and Socialist parties, it was apparent that the clique of about 300 young officers who overthrew the heirs of the Salazar dictatorship on April 25 now will dominate the government's day-to-day operations.

School organ paid off

Cape man bound over on auto theft charge

BENTON — Phillip Luttrell of Cape Girardeau, who is charged with auto theft, was bound over to appear July 25 in Circuit Court following a preliminary hearing Wednesday during Magistrate Court before Judge Lloyd Briggs.

After pleading guilty to a speeding charge, Carl Chris of Oran was given a 30- day suspended jail sentence and placed on probation on condition he surrender his driver's license for 90 days.

Jack Keys of Chaffee received a 90- day suspended jail sentence and was placed on probation for one year after he pleaded guilty to a defraud charge.

The case against Ronald J. Eichhorn of Chaffee on a charge of possession of marijuana was continued until July 24 to allow him time to obtain an attorney.

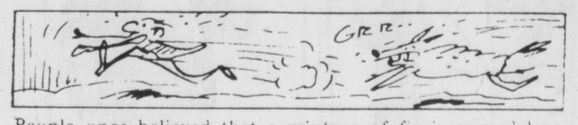
After waiving a preliminary hearing, Wayne Lee Harris was bound over to appear July 25 in Circuit Court. Harris is charged with escaping custody and stealing personal property on June 12 from Lambert's Cafe.

After pleading guilty to an improper parking charge, Norman Richard Cruse of Essex was sentenced to 90 days in the county jail.

Fined for speeding were: JoAnn Dismuke of Bertrand, $33.50; Otis Hill of Sikeston, $27.50; David Lane of Charleston, $31.50; Jerry Hays of Marston, $27.50; Homer Harold Spradling of Cape Girardeau, $31.50; and Cubie Lee Townsend of Charleston, $29.50.

Also fined for traffic violations were:

Carl Harry McCoy of Sikeston, careless and imprudent driving, $41.50; Lilysses Neal Jr. of Sikeston, defective brakes, $51.50; Larry Sloan of Wyatt, exceeding weight for which licensed, $136; Clay Edward Higdon of Sikeston, careless and imprudent driving, $26.50; and Cecil Gadberry of Sikeston, exceeding weight for which licensed, $50.



People once believed that a mixture of fig juice and hog fat would cure rabid dog bites.

"FISH TALK" BY JUNIOR WEBB

ACCURACY!

Whether you fly cast, spin or bait cast . . . learn to be accurate. Overshooting or undershooting good fishing spots not only mean empty stringers, it tears down your estimation of your own fishing ability. Practice at home. Pick out any target (not necessarily the neighbor's cat) and cast at it until you can hit it without thinking of the fundamentals. But before you set your sights on winning a casting tourney remember this — the most important requisite to good casting is the rod, reel and line. They must be of good quality and kept in top condition. Also, make sure the reel is filled with the proper amount of line. And forget that 100 foot cast! Start with casts of about 30 feet and work up to 60 feet. This is the casting range that accounts for practically all fish caught on artificials, anyway!

Lesson No. 11 - Check Your Bike For Safety

Frequently you will see men looking under the hood of their cars, checking underneath the car, and generally looking the car over. If you were to walk up and ask them what the trouble is most would tell you nothing was wrong...right now...but it is always best to check over any vehicle BEFORE something goes wrong. This is called a "safety check."

In making a safety check on your bike, which you should make a practice of doing at least once each week, there are many things to look for and examine. WHEELS: Probably the most important parts of your bike are the wheels since they make it possible for the bike to move. It is logical then that the wheels should get careful attention. Check the spokes and see that they are secure. If one is loose, tighten it with your spoke wrench, obtainable at any bike shop. Turn your bike upside down and roll the wheels by hand to see if the wheels are straight. If not, have them straightened at a bike shop until you learn how to do this properly. (If you over-tighten the spokes this can cause the wheel to be crooked.) See that the nuts, holding your wheels on, are firmly tight, but here again, do not over-tighten. Make sure the wheels do not rub as they go around.

BRAKES: Your bike brake should stop the bike fast enough to skid tires on dry, clean pavement. If they do not, have them adjusted. Test your brakes in your driveway or other area off the street.

LIGHTS: As mentioned in lesson No. 1, take your bike lights apart, remove the batteries, wipe them off with a clean, soft cloth. Also wipe out the inside of the light casings before replaing batteries. Keep the rear reflector clean and give the same care to your rear light as you do your headlight.

CHAIN: Check your chain and the chain guard. The chain should have just a little "play" in it. A few drops of oil on the chain weekly is good maintenance. The chain guard should be secure and tight.

SEAT: Be sure your seat is properly adjusted. You should be able to reach the pedals easily. If you cannot, loosen the seat nut and lower your seat. Be sure the seat adjustment nut is TIGHT.

HANDLE GRIPS: When these become worn, replace them right away. Glue these on so they are always tight.

HANDLE BARS: See that your handle bars are in line with your front wheel and the adjustment nut is tight. Do not raise handle bars above the position where you can grasp them, without reaching up above your chest, when sitting on the seat of your bike.

REFLECTIVE TAPES: It is a good idea, in addition to your rear light and or reflector, to strip your rear fender with reflective tape. Check your tape on your weekly check-ups and replace it when it dulls or begins to peel.

HORN OR BELL: See that you have either a horn or a bell, and be sure it works. If not, replace it if it cannot be fixed.

TIRES: Check tires for proper pressure. It is a good idea to have a tire guage of your own, so you can check pressure at home or anywhere. Proper tire pressure is usually shown on the side of each tire.

CLEANING: Clean your bike regularly. A clean bike will last longer, ride better and be safer. When you wash it down be sure to put a few drops of oil on the moving parts when finished.

QUESTIONS	YES	NO
Spokes that are too tight or too loose can cause bike wheels to be wobbly.	—	—
If your brakes don't skid the tires on dry pavement they need adjustment	—	—
It is best to make a "safety check" of your bike every two or three months	—	—
Bike lights work fine without any special care.	—	—
Your chain guard should be firm and secure at all times.	—	—
It's o.k. to have handle bars raised to nose level, if you like them that way.	—	—
If you find something wrong with your bike, and you can't fix it or no one in the family can fix it, it is your responsibility to get it to a bike shop and have it fixed properly.	—	—

Council to seek new grantee for Head Start

PORTAGEVILLE — The Head Start Council decided Tuesday to seek a new grantee for their program, according to C. B. Huber, Head Start director.

The decision stems from an earlier vote by the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation (DAEOC) to dismiss John Porter of Kennett, as the social services director of the Head Start program.

Huber said the council's decision Tuesday rejects DAOEC as a grantee, but the final decision of rejection rests in the Health, Education and Welfare Department's regional office in Kansas City.

Andrew Cain of Essex, chairman of the DAEOC board, reported that the board would continue to reject Porter as an employe.

"No real action was taken against Porter at this meeting," Huber said.

Porter presented his defense at the close of the meeting.

World News In Brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House lawyer James St. Clair made his final argument in President Nixon's defense today to a House Judiciary Committee that has already received proposed articles for his impeachment.

A working paper prepared by Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., for the committee's consideration, proposes seven articles charging Nixon with violations of the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

A draft of the articles was distributed privately by Brooks to Democratic committee members. A copy was obtained by The Associated Press.

Brooks' major article is a charge that Nixon obstructed justice by a series of actions that interfered with the investigation and prosecution of crimes growing out of the Watergate break-in and a cover-up and the burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's doctor.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A young abductor who was paid $50,000 ransom by his wealthy boss shot the executive and his wife to death in their expensive car, then pleaded "Don't shoot!" before surrendering to authorities, the FBI says. Slain were Sydney Gans, 64, owner of a prosperous paper bag company, and his 60-year-old wife, Lillian, who had been held hostage by the gunman. Authorities said Thomas Knight, 23, of Miami, taken into custody, was an employe of Gans' firm. He was charged with two counts of first-degree murder.

SWEDESBORO, N.J.(AP) — Migrant farm workers have helped New Jersey maintain its nickname, "Garden State," but their plight has given the state a black eye. The "migrant problem" flared into public view earlier this week when state Assemblyman Byron Baer's arm was broken in a melee at a migrant farm in this southern New Jersey community. He has advocated better living conditions for migrant workers. Baer had gone there to get a rare glimpse inside a New Jersey migrant labor farm. But Marcos Portalatin, the farm foreman accused of breaking Baer's arm, told The Associated Press the 11 workers there don't like "nosey" state officials.

Western Electric and AT&T to honor the picket lines. Workers in other locals in the state were expected to return to work today.

At midnight Wednesday 33 contracts covering 750,000 Bell employes expired. Neither the company's offer nor the union's demand was disclosed.

RHODE ISLAND — National Guardsmen and state troopers were ordered off duty in Cranston by Gov. Philip Noel, who announced a settlement Wednesday in the walkout of guards at the state prison in the town.

Some of the 247 guards walked off the job to protest what they felt was lenient handling of an inmate who had assaulted a guard. Noel fired the guards, triggering the full-scale strike two days ago.

He said he was assured by officials of the Brotherhood of Correctional Officers that future union policy would not include the use of job actions as a bargaining tactic.
